

CONTENTS

	Acknowledgements · xiii
	Map of southern Europe · xvi
INTRODUCTION	Southern Europe and the Making of a Global Revolutionary South	1
	What constitution did revolutionaries fight for? A few introductory remarks	18
	The making of a constitutional order and its conflicts: plan of the book	27
PART I	WAR, ARMY AND REVOLUTION	33
	Introduction	33
CHAPTER 1	Conspiracy and Military Careers in the Napoleonic Wars	39
	Secret societies and the planning of revolutions	39
	From fighting in the Napoleonic wars to declaring the revolution	57
CHAPTER 2	Pronunciamientos and the Military Origins of the Revolutions	87
	After the Napoleonic wars: economic crisis and an impossible military demobilisation	87
	Communicating the revolutionary script: nation, army and constitution	93
	The army and popular mobilisation	113
	In the name of what nation?	130
	Conclusions	137

CHAPTER 3	Civil Wars: Armies, Guerrilla Warfare and Mobilisation in the Rural World	139
	Portugal and political change through military pronunciamientos	146
	Fighting in the name of a prisoner king: counterrevolution in Spain	161
	Civil war as a war of independence: Sicily against Naples	170
	Civil war as a crisis of the Ottoman order: the Greek revolution	175
	Conclusions	187
CHAPTER 4	National Wars of Liberation and the End of the Revolutionary Experiences	190
	Introduction	190
	The failure of the revolutionary script in Naples, Piedmont and Spain	192
	Greece and the nationalisation of the anti-Ottoman conflict	205
	Conclusions	215
CHAPTER 5	Crossing the Mediterranean: Volunteers, Mercenaries, Refugees	218
	Introduction: Palermo as a Mediterranean revolutionary hub	218
	Sir Richard Church: bridging empire, counterrevolution and revolution	220
	Emmanuele Scordili and the Greek diasporas	231
	Andrea Mangiaruva: volunteer for freedom and economic migrant?	241
	Conclusions	251

PART II	EXPERIENCING THE CONSTITUTION: CITIZENSHIP, COMMUNITIES AND TERRITORIES	255
	Introduction	255
CHAPTER 6	Re-conceiving Territories: The Revolutions as Territorial Crises	259
	Introduction	259
	Constitutional devolution and federal royalism in Spain	262
	Resisting centralisation: Genoa, Sicily and provincial freedoms	274
	Emancipating local councils; creating a new state: Portugal and Greece	285
CHAPTER 7	Electing Parliamentary Assemblies	301
CHAPTER 8	Petitioning in the Name of the Constitution	323
	Conclusions: political participation and local autonomies after the 1820s	339
PART III	BUILDING CONSENSUS, PRACTISING PROTEST: THE REVOLUTIONARY PUBLIC SPHERE AND ITS ENEMIES	347
	Introduction	347
CHAPTER 9	Shaping Public Opinion	351
	Communicating the revolution, educating citizens: information and sociability	351
	Invasions and conspiracies: rumours and the international imagination	366

CHAPTER 10	Taking Control of Public Space	380
	Revolutionary ceremonies as rituals of concord	380
	Rituals of contestation: singing the revolution	396
	Secret societies: from clandestine opposition to public advocacy	410
	Protest and corporate interests in Madrid, Palermo and Hydra: artisans and sailors	428
CHAPTER 11	A Counterrevolutionary Public Sphere? The Popular Culture of Absolutism	443
	Conclusions: from revolutionary practices to public memory	471
PART IV	CITIZENS OR THE FAITHFUL? RELIGION AND THE FOUNDATION OF A NEW POLITICAL ORDER	481
	Introduction	481
CHAPTER 12	Christianity against Despotism	487
	Religious nations, intolerant nations?	487
	Reforming churches: priests as educators	503
CHAPTER 13	A Revolution within the Church	510
	Begrudging endorsement? Church hierarchies and the revolutions	510
	A divided clergy	521
	Preaching in favour of or against the new order	546
	The politics of miracles	553
	Conclusions	558
EPILOGUE	Unfinished Business: The Age of Revolutions in Southern Europe after the 1820s	567
	Yannis Macriyannis and the betrayal of the Greek revolution	571

Bernardo de Sá Nogueira (Viscount and Marquis of Sá da Bandeira) and the search for political stability in Portugal	579
--	-----

Guglielmo Pepe: transnational fame and the endurance of Neapolitan patriotism	588
--	-----

Antonio Alcalá Galiano and the transition to moderate liberalism	595
---	-----

Conclusion	603
-------------------	-----

Chronology	607
-------------------	-----

Glossary of Foreign Terms	613
----------------------------------	-----

Bibliography	615
---------------------	-----

Index	665
--------------	-----

All history books are based on the research and ideas produced by other scholars, but some books are especially reliant on the practical expertise and intellectual engagement of colleagues from many countries. This is certainly the case with this work, which attempts to synthesise, combine and reinterpret a variety of national historiographical traditions. I could not have written this book without participating in the dozens of seminar activities and discussions of the Leverhulme-funded project 'Re-imagining Democracy in the Mediterranean', held in many different cities across Europe between 2012 and 2015. I am indebted to Joanna Innes, Mark Philp and Eduardo Posada-Carbó for inviting me to take part in it and for their friendship and advice since then.

The book could never have taken shape without the generosity too of fellow historians who shared their knowledge concerning Portuguese, Spanish, Italian and Greek history. Doing research in so many different countries and interacting with so many scholarly communities has been an immensely rewarding and pleasurable aspect of working on southern European history. In Lisbon I received much support from Grégoire Bron,