

Contents

List of Figures, Tables and Diagrams	IX
Abbreviations	XII
Introduction	1
1 The Surviving Texts and the Typology of Genres	13
1.1 Writing in Early Rus: A Concise Overview	13
1.2 Letopisi (the Annals)	30
1.3 The History of the World: Translations of Foreign Chronicles and Chronographs	44
1.4 Attempts at Writing Non-Annalistic History of Rus	53
1.5 Minor Forms of Historical Writing	59
1.6 A Comparative Perspective: Historical Writing in Anglo-Saxon England and Old Rus	70
2 The Beginnings of Historical Writing in Kiev	91
2.1 The Manuscript Witnesses and Redactions of Povest' vremennykh let	93
2.2 Texts-Predecessors of Povest' vremennykh let : An Introduction into Discussion	100
2.3 The Problem of the Oldest Tale (the Non-Annalistic 'Nucleus')	111
2.4 The Traces of Early Annals and the 'Two Beginnings' of letopisi Writing	119
2.5 Historical Notes in Iakov the Monk's Memorial and Encomium : A 'Royal Inscription' of Vladimir?	128
2.6 The Emergence of Rus Historical Writing in a Comparative Perspective	144
2.7 Reporting the Pagan Past and the Conversion: Povest' vremennykh let and Bede's Historia Ecclesiastica	157
3 Historical Writing in Novgorod	171
3.1 The Text-Relationships of Extant Novgorodian letopisi	174
3.2 Lists of Officials	194
3.3 The Beginnings of Historical Writing in Novgorod: the 11th Century	198
3.4 The Archiepiscopal Annals of Novgorod and Their Authors	213
3.5 How Did the Archiepiscopal Annalists Work?	219

3.6	The Circle of Events Reported by the Archiepiscopal Annals	226
3.7	The Archiepiscopal Annals and the 'Living Chronicles' of Western Europe	233
3.8	The Synodal Manuscript: A Copy of the Archiepiscopal Annals Kept and Continued in St. George's Monastery	243
3.9	Excerpts from the Archiepiscopal Annals Made for the Annunciation Monastery	253
3.10	Historical Writing in Novgorod: A General Overview	259
3.11	Oral Historical Tradition in Novgorod	263
4	The Functions of the Annals in Early Rus	277
4.1	Existing Theories and Their Discussion	280
4.2	Who Were Patrons, Supervisors, and Authors of the Annals?	290
4.3	What Kinds of Events Did the Annalists Report?	303
4.4	Who Could Be Mentioned in the Annals, and Why: Non-Rurikids in letopisi	314
4.5	How Were the Annals Maintained and Revised? Did They Circulate in Copies?	325
4.6	The Annals and Legal Texts	338
4.7	Princely 'Messages' in the Annals	341
4.8	The 1130s–40s as a Crucial Period in the Documental and Annalistic Writing	353
4.9	Political Evaluations in the Annals: Kiev Up to the 1130s and the Northeast	359
4.10	Ecclesiastical, Family, and Natural Events in the Annals	371
4.11	Summary of the Data Obtained and Comparative Reflections	382
	Conclusion	394
	Appendix 1: A Note on the Reckoning of Time in Early Rus	399
	Appendix 2: A List of Rus Pre-1400 Manuscripts Containing Historical Writing	405
	Appendix 3: The Author's Russian-Language Published Works Corresponding to Parts of this Book	409
	Bibliography	412
	Index of Texts	453
	Index of Manuscript Shelfmarks	458
	Index of Geographical and Ethnic Names	459
	Index of Persons	464