

Contents

List of figures, tables and boxes	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Preface	xiii
1 Analytic eclecticism	1
Paradigms and research traditions	4
What analytic eclecticism is and does	9
Recognizing analytic eclecticism	19
2 Eclecticism, pragmatism, and paradigms in international relations	24
The limits of the inter-paradigm debate	26
What eclecticism can contribute	35
Analytic eclecticism and the pragmatist turn	43
3 War and peace, security and insecurity	49
Robert Jervis, American Foreign Policy in a New Era (2005)	59
Martha Finnemore, The Purpose of Intervention (2003)	68
Etel Solingen, Nuclear Logics (2007)	74
T. V. Paul, The Tradition of Non-Use of Nuclear Weapons (2009)	83
David Kang, China Rising (2007)	90
Conclusion	97
4 Global political economy	102
Leonard Seabrooke, The Social Sources of Financial Power (2006)	110
Timothy Sinclair, The New Masters of Capital (2005)	118
Cornelia Woll, Firm Interests (2008)	125
Nicolas Jabko, Playing the Market (2006)	133
Richard Stubbs, Rethinking Asia's Economic Miracle (2005)	139
Conclusion	147

5	Order and governance, regional and global	152
	Michael Barnett and Martha Finnemore, Rules for the World (2004)	159
	Benjamin Schiff, Building the International Criminal Court (2008)	168
	Ian Hurd, After Anarchy (2007)	176
	Frank Schimmelfennig, The EU, NATO and the Integration of Europe (2003)	183
	Alice Ba, [Re]Negotiating East and Southeast Asia (2009)	192
	Conclusion	200
6	Conclusion	204
	Lessons from eclectic scholarship	204
	The risks, trade-offs, and promise of analytic eclecticism	214
	Notes	225
	Bibliography	229
	Index	246