

Contents

Preface	xi
1 Introduction	1
Why local government?	2
The debate on central–local relations	4
The context of local government reform	5
How do they do it elsewhere?	7
The notion of social capital	8
The relationship between local performance and the economy	9
Conclusions	10
2 Great expectations – the position in 1997	11
Introduction	11
The view of local government: the legacy of expectation	12
The concern of the 1997 New Labour government: the legacy of fear	15
Paving the way for reform	17
Real issues on the agenda: which key issues did local authorities face in 1997?	18
Conclusions	23
3 New approaches to decision making in local authorities	24
Introduction: implementing local government reform	24
The new council constitutions	25
Electoral arrangements	26
The role of the council	27

The role of the executive	28
Scrutiny and overview	30
The emerging roles of local councillors	32
Reforming local government representation at the centre	34
Conclusions	36
4 Promoting well-being and the community's interest	37
Introduction	37
Understanding the role of a general power of competence – the European Charter of Local Self-governance	38
The duty to promote the economic, social, and environmental well-being of the communities being served	39
Promoting community leadership	41
Community Strategies	45
Community leadership and CPA	46
Community Strategies and Local Agenda 21 (LA21): towards environmental well-being	47
Community Strategies and Local Development Frameworks (LDFs)	48
Removing plan requirements	49
Conclusions	49
5 Performance and freedoms	51
Introduction	51
The role of the Audit Commission	52
Best value: why competition?	53
The best-value process	54
Comprehensive Performance Assessment (CPA)	56
Does performance assessment work?	58
Intervention	59
Capacity for delivery	61
Freedoms and flexibilities	62
Conclusions	63
6 Delivery with partners – procurement, privatisation, partnerships, trading, and choice	64
Introduction	64
Local authorities as employers	65
Privatisation	66
Joint service delivery between local authorities	67
Strategic partnering	68
The Lyons and Gershon reviews: from central to local delivery?	71
Choice	72

The growing potential for the voluntary sector	72
Conclusions	73
7 Joining-up around customers – the role of e-government	74
Introduction	74
The problems of silo government for the citizen	75
Implementing local e-government	76
Local implementation of e-government	78
Developing and implementing priority outcomes	81
The barriers to citizen engagement and delivery	81
Efficiency and e-government	83
Conclusions: changing the citizen's relationship with government?	84
8 Councillors, Standards, and Corruption	86
Introduction	86
The system before the Local Government Act 2000	87
The Nolan Committee on Standards in Public Life	88
The Standards Board for England	89
Planning	89
The conduct of local authority staff	90
Public service ethics	91
Conclusions	92
9 The future of local government finance	94
Introduction	94
Local government's constitutional role and finance	95
Central direction and local discretion – assessing the boundaries	96
The continuing legacy of the Layfield Committee	97
The dynamics of efficiency	98
The use of property assets – an example of improving efficiency at the local level	99
A new freedom – the case of business rates	101
A new localist solution?	102
Conclusions	104
10 New localism	106
Introduction	106
The rise of new localism	108
Place shaping	111
Pressures for reductions in local power	112
Culture and habit	114
Conclusions	116

11	Local Strategic Partnerships – the way forward	117
	Introduction	117
	Partnership working – programmes and policies	117
	Local Strategic Partnerships	119
	How are LSPs developing?	121
	The future for LSPs, LAAs, and Public Service Boards?	125
	Conclusions	127
12	Parishes, Town Councils, and Neighbourhood Working	128
	Introduction	128
	Developments since 1997	129
	Parish and town councils	131
	Devolved working in local authorities	133
	Emerging forms of local management	134
	Neighbourhood development in the future	135
	Conclusions	136
13	Regions, sub-regions, and London	139
	Introduction	139
	Why regionalism?	141
	Regional working in England 1993–2004 – moving from central ways of working	142
	Regionalising the centre	144
	How have these regional arrangements worked for local government in England?	144
	Sub-regions	145
	London	148
	Conclusions	152
14	What is the future of local government?	153
	Introduction	153
	Shaping influences for the future of local government	154
	Conclusions	160
	Bibliography	164
	Index	176