

Introduction: layers of map thinking	1
1 (Re)Turning to cartographic things	11
2 From object-oriented ontology (OOO) to map studies, and vice versa	21
3 Stretching theories: cartographic objects, map acts	29
4 To rest on cartographic surfaces	38
5 Learning from cartifacts, drifting through mapscares	49
6 The productive failures of literary cartographic objects: the father, the son, The Road , and the broken map	63
7 The gentle politics of non-human narration: a Europe map's autobiography	72
8 Pictured maps, object renderings, and close readings	86
9 Animated cartography, or entering in dialogue with maps	98
10 Maps vis-à-vis maps: (in-car) navigation, coexistence, and the digital others	112
11 Re-visitations at cartographic sites: the becomings and 'unbecomings' of maps	124
Conclusions	138
Index	146