

CONTENTS

Preface to the second edition	v
Introduction	1
Doctrine and theory	3
The centrality of jurisprudence	6
Introduction to Part 1: Justice	9
Subjectivism	11
Other options	13
Neutrality	14
1. Utilitarianism	17
Why be a utilitarian?	19
Liberalism, utility and moral neutrality	21
Uncertainty	25
Consequences	26
Utility and distribution	29
Act and rule utilitarianism	35
Rule utilitarianism as a jurisprudential theory	37
Liberalism and preferences	40
Rights and utility	44
Selected reading	45
2. Rawls	47
Introduction	47
Reflective equilibrium	48
The original position	51
Criticism of utilitarianism	52
The thin theory of the good	56
Two principles	58
The difference principle	59
Choosing the difference principle	62
Greater equality?	65
The first principle of justice	66
Political liberalism	70
Selected reading	76

3. Nozick	77
An arbitrary starting point?	79
Comparison with Rawls	82
Principle of acquisition	83
Pale self-ownership	86
Patterned distribution and historical entitlement	89
Markets and equality	91
Giving content to rights	94
Selected reading	96
 4. Finnis on objective goods	 97
Goods and desires	98
Objective goods	100
Goods and human nature	102
Prudence and morality	103
Incommensurability of goods	106
The common good	109
Law	110
Hume's return?	110
Justice	113
Basic rights	115
Selected reading	118
 Introduction to Part 2: Law	 119
Natural law and legal positivism	123
 5. Hart	 127
Legal positivism	127
What positivists do and do not claim	128
Normativity and reductionism	131
Rules and the internal point of view	133
Powers and secondary rules	136
The legal system	139
Adjudication	142
Distinguishing cases	146
Legal obligation and the internal point of view	149
A different positivism?	152
Rules and formal justice	156
The minimum content of natural law	158
The nature of conceptual analysis	162
Hart's theory as political philosophy	167
Legal doctrine and legal theory	174

Selected reading	179
6. Dworkin	181
Rules and principles	182
Principles and positivism	184
The rule of recognition and the soundest theory	188
Constructive interpretation	191
Semantic theories	198
Some scepticisms	203
The "Threshold Objection"	206
Choosing a legal theory	210
Law as integrity	214
Order, theory and community	219
Selected reading	222
7. Fuller	223
Facts, values and purposes	223
Good and bad purposes	225
The eight principles	226
Law and purpose	228
Kramer's criticisms (part one)	229
The point of law	233
Internal and external moralities	234
Kramer's criticisms (part two)	238
Recapitulation and reconstruction	242
Other worlds	244
Baselines for comparison	247
Guidance by rule and by aspiration	249
Selected reading	253
Part 3: Rights	255
8. The analysis of rights	255
Some fundamental ideas	256
Legal and moral rights	263
Hard atoms and soft molecules	267
Rights as complex and preemptory	271
A slight digression	274
Hohfeld's analysis	275
Kantian and Hohfeldian rights compared	280
Internal complexity restored?	283
Is the absence of a duty a right?	288
Internal complexity without preemptory force?	291

Rights against nobody?	294
Rights against specific persons?	296
Levels of abstraction	297
Peremptory force: exclusionary or conclusory?	298
Exclusion upon exclusion	300
One set of reasons: two perspectives	301
Exclusion abandoned	303
The “will” and “interest” theories	304
MacCormick’s criticisms	310
Selected reading	312

Index