

Contents

Subject and plan of this book	1
Insight and transformation in natural science and social study	2
Institutional possibility in social theory and social science	2
Institutional possibility in political philosophy	4
Democracy and experimentalism	6
Democratic experimentalism and institutional fetishism	6
The convergence thesis	8
The practical promise of democratic experimentalism: from the existing policy debate to the missing programmatic conversation	11
The shape and limits of a policy debate	11
Innovation in the institutional forms of the market economy	12
The class structure of the industrial democracies	13
Innovation in the institutional forms of political democracy	15
Innovation in the institutional forms of civil society	17
The imagination of alternatives: social-theoretical assumptions of democratic experimentalism	18
First and second natures in social life	18
Routine and revolution	19
Real interests and structural change	21

The disciplinary tools of democratic experimentalism	22
The twin disciplines of the institutional imagination	22
The nonexistence of institutional economics	23
The arrested development of legal thought	26
The genius of contemporary law	26
The limit of contemporary legal thought	28
Complex enforcement at the threshold of structural change	30
Structural but episodic intervention	30
The missing agent	31
The spell of rationalizing legal analysis	34
Legal thought and social democracy	34
The method of policy and principle	36
The diffusion of rationalizing legal analysis	38
The antiexperimentalist influence of rationalizing legal analysis	39
The complex structure of legal consciousness	41
The moment of nineteenth-century legal science	41
The moment of rationalizing legal analysis	46
The moment of the tactical reinterpretation of legal doctrine	51
Interest-group pluralism and rationalizing legal analysis	52
Two incompatible vocabularies about law	52
The movable boundary between the vocabularies	54
Disturbing implications	57
The fourfold root of rationalizing legal analysis: the prejudice against analogy	59
An entrenched prejudice	59

Attributes of analogy	60
The groundlessness of the prejudice against analogy	61
The fourfold root of rationalizing legal analysis: upholding a regime of rights	63
The rule of law and the regime of rights	63
Rationalizing legal analysis and the regime of rights	65
The two genealogies of law	65
Revisionary power	67
From connected policies and principles to theory-like conceptions	67
The ineradicable divergence between the two genealogies of law	69
Revisionary power reconsidered	74
The argumentative structure of contemporary legal theory	76
Arbitrariness in the antidote to arbitrariness	77
The fourfold root of rationalizing legal analysis: pessimistic progressive reformism	78
Conservative reformism	78
Pessimistic progressive reformism	81
Rationalizing legal analysis as aversive social therapy	82
The example of substantive equal protection: rational disharmonies	83
The example of substantive equal protection: failures of efficacy	91
Deepening and generalizing the causal skepticism: law under two political economies	97
The practical political failures of rationalizing legal analysis	105
The fourfold root of rationalizing legal analysis: the commanding role of the judge	106
The historical context of an obsession	106
Adjudication and rational reconstruction	108

Putting adjudication in its place	110
How should judges decide cases?	113
Kenosis: escaping the misdirections of contemporary theory	119
Theory as obstacle	119
The radicalization of indeterminacy	120
The project of a pure theory of law	122
The functionalist approach to law	123
The historical-culturalist approach to law	126
Kenosis	128
Legal analysis as institutional imagination	129
Aims of a revised practice of legal analysis	129
Mapping and criticism	130
Imagining the alternative futures of a free society: extended social democracy	135
The idea of alternative institutional futures	135
The direction of extended social democracy	138
The law and institutions of extended social democracy	139
The spirit and champions of extended social democracy	143
The internal instability of extended social democracy	144
Little politics for big people?	147
Imagining the alternative futures of a free society: radical polyarchy	148
The direction of radical polyarchy	148
The law and institutions of radical polyarchy	150
The spiritual paradoxes of a liberal communitarianism	153
The practical dilemma of devolution and inequality	154
The admonitory example of workers' ownership	157
Radical polyarchy reconstructed	161

---

Imagining the alternative futures of a free society: mobilizational democracy	163
The direction of mobilizational democracy	163
The law and institutions of mobilizational democracy	164
Social experimentalism and human rights	166
Political virtue and political realism	169
 The campaign to split the difference between rationalism and historicism	 170
The deflation of rationalism	170
The inflation of historicism	174
Splitting the difference between rationalism and         historicism in philosophy and social theory	177
Splitting the difference between rationalism and         historicism in legal analysis	177
The campaign to split the difference between         rationalism and historicism reoriented	179
 Prophecy and prostration in legal thought	 182
The cult of state law and the quest for latent moral         order	182
Democratic experimentalism opposed to latent moral         order	184
A parable: the Jews and their law	186
The realist and the visionary	189
 Index	 193