

Contents

Introductory remarks	vii
Jiří Nekvapil and Tamah Sherman
Contributors	xi
Prologue
The integrative potential of Language Management Theory	1
Jiří Nekvapil
Part I: Behavior toward language in East and Central Europe: Power and beyond
A language management approach to language maintenance and shift: A study from post-Soviet Belarus	15
Marián Sloboda
Hungarian in Slovakia: Language management in a bilingual minority community	49
István Lanstyák and Gizella Szabó Mihály
Managing hegemony: Native English speakers in the Czech Republic	75
Tamah Sherman
Part II: Behavior toward language in Japan: Theory and practice of new contact situations
Host management of Japanese among young native users in contact situations	99
Sau Kuen Fan
Native speakers' application of contact norms in intercultural contact situations with English-speaking, Chinese-speaking and Portuguese-speaking non-native speakers of Japanese	123
Lisa Fairbrother
A typology of problems in contact situations	151
Hidehiro Muraoka

Part III: Behavior toward language in Australia: Perspectives from a globalizing academic sphere

Japanese speakers’ management of transference behaviour in an Australian context 169
Helen Marriott

Negotiation of language selection in Japanese-English exchange partnerships 185
Yuko Masuda

Management of study difficulties by Japanese students at an Australian university 207
Kuniko Yoshimitsu

Negotiation of norms in academic contact situations 225
Hiroyuki Nemoto

Epilogue

An apology for Language Management Theory 245
Björn H. Jernudd

Index 253