

Contents

Acknowledgements	page vii
List of contributors	ix
Monstrous adaptations: an introduction Richard J. Hand and Jay McRoy	1
Part I From page to scream: literary adaptation and horror cinema
Paradigms of metamorphosis and transmutation: Thomas Edison's Frankenstein and John Barrymore's Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde Richard J. Hand	9
Painting the life out of her: aesthetic integration and disintegration in Jean Epstein's La Chute de la maison Usher Guy Crucianelli	20
The unfilmable? H. P. Lovecraft and the cinema Julian Petley	35
Imperfect geometry: identity and culture in Clive Barker's 'The Forbidden' and Bernard Rose's Candyman Brigid Cherry	48
Part II Re-imaginings and re-articulations: thematic adaptation in contemporary horror cinema
Out from the realist underground; or, the Baron of Blood visits Cannes: recursive and self-reflexive patterns in David Cronenberg's Videodrome and eXistenZ Steffen Hantke	67
'These children that you spit on': horror and generic hybridity Andy W. Smith	82
'Our reaction was only human': monstrous becomings in Abel Ferrara's Body Snatchers Jay McRoy	95

Part III From avant-garde to exploitation: cinematic experiments as monstrous adaptation

- Adapting the occult: horror and the avant-garde in the cinema of Ken Jacobs Marianne Shaneen 111
- The Gorgon*: adapting classical myth as Gothic romance
I. Q. Hunter 127
- Marion Crane dies twice Murray Pomerance 140

Part IV Displacements and border crossings: horror cinema and transcultural adaptation

- Adapting legends: urban legends and their adaptation in horror cinema Mikel J. Koven 157
- Fulcanelli as a vampiric Frankenstein and Jesus as his vampiric monster: the Frankenstein and Dracula myths in Guillermo del Toro's Cronos Brad O'Brien 172
- Gothic horrors, family secrets and the patriarchal imperative: the early horror films of Mario Bava
Reynold Humphries 181
- 'In the church of the poison mind': adapting the metaphor of psychopathology to look back at the mad, monstrous 80s Ruth Goldberg 192
- 'Everyone will suffer': national identity and the spirit of subaltern vengeance in Nakata Hideo's Ringu and Gore Verbinski's The Ring Linnie Blake 209

- Notes 229
- Bibliography 238
- Index 254