

Contents

Preface to the new edition	page vii
Preface	xxv
1 Societies as organized power networks	1
2 The end of general social evolution: how prehistoric peoples evaded power	34
3 The emergence of stratification, states, and multi-power-actor civilization in Mesopotamia	73
4 A comparative analysis of the emergence of stratification, states, and multi-power-actor civilizations	105
5 The first empires of domination: the dialectics of compulsory cooperation	130
6 “Indo-Europeans” and iron: expanding, diversified power networks	179
7 Phoenicians and Greeks: decentralized multi-power-actor civilizations	190
8 Revitalized empires of domination: Assyria and Persia	231
9 The Roman territorial empire	250
10 Ideology transcendent: the Christian ecumene	301
11 A comparative excursus into the world religions: Confucianism, Islam, and (especially) Hindu caste	341
12 The European dynamic: I. The intensive phase, A.D. 800–1155	373
13 The European dynamic: II. The rise of coordinating states, 1155–1477	416
14 The European dynamic: III. International capitalism and organic national states, 1477–1760	450
15 European conclusions: explaining European dynamism – capitalism, Christendom, and states	500
16 Patterns of world-historical development in agrarian societies	518
Index	543