

Contents

List of Figures	page vii
Acknowledgements	viii
Introduction	1
1 Print, Production, Authors and Readers	25
Quantifying Print Output from the Reformation to 1800	30
Printed Newsletters and Visual Imagery	41
Newspapers and Periodicals as Political Texts in the Century after 1660	47
Pamphlets	51
The Printing Workshop: Production, Costs, Sales and Workflow	55
Copyright, Intellectual Property and Dissemination	59
Authors and Intended Readers: Milton, Hobbes and Spinoza	62
The Changing Dynamics of Print and Dissemination	68
2 Instability and Politicisation (1630–77)	71
Power and Propaganda Visualised in the Thirty Years War	73
Pamphlets and Politics in England in the 1640s	79
Print during the Commonwealth and Protectorate	95
Print in France during the Fronde	107
Access to Politics: the Netherlands	115
Political Volatility and Print in the Mid-seventeenth Century	123
3 Subversive Print in the Early Enlightenment	128
Biblical Interpretation and the Power of Intolerance in Civil Society	133
Impact of Forbidden Reading	146
Civil Society in Fact and Fiction in the Age of Locke, Toland, Fénelon and Montesquieu	153
Newspapers, Journals and Periodicals around the Turn of the Century	167
Public Opinion and the Public Sphere 1685–1721	174
4 Translation and Transmission across Cultural Borders	180
Dictionaries and Encyclopedias	182
Theories of Language and the Tower of Babel	191
Books and Reputations across Frontiers: Case Studies	199
Translating and Rewriting Beccaria's On Crimes and Punishments	204
Review Journals and the Imagined Republic of Readers	208

Revolution and Neology	217
Speaking, Writing, Translating: Texts and Concepts	220
5 High Enlightenment, Political Texts and Reform 1748–89	225
Censorship, Libel and Illegal Books	231
News and Political Periodicals	246
Patriotic Societies, ‘Improvement’ and the Use of Data	254
Pamphleteering and Political Lobbying	264
Government-sponsored Print	273
Public Opinion and Political Discourse in the European Context	279
6 Revolution: Democracy and Loyalism in Print 1789–95	284
Women in Politics and Print	288
Democratising the ‘Political Nation’: Paris Radicals	295
Further Responses in Print	308
Making and Shaping the News	315
Language and the Creation of ‘National’ Understanding	324
Publishing and Revolutionary Politics	331
Conclusions	336
Select Bibliography	344
Index	364