Linda Hickson, Ph.D., Professor Emerita, served as Professor of Education at Teachers College, Columbia University from 1979 to 2013. As long-time coordinator of the programs in intellectual disability/autism, she taught and mentored many master and doctoral students preparing for careers in the education of people with disabilities. In addition, she directed several international initiatives to enhance the educational opportunities of people with disabilities in countries such as Ireland, Qatar, and Cyprus. She has published numerous chapters and research articles on a wide array of topics, including theoretical and applied aspects of decision making in people with disabilities. More recently, her research has focused on finding ways to reduce the social vulnerability of adolescents and adults with intellectual disability and autism by increasing their ability to make effective self-protective decisions. Dr. Hickson, with her collaborator, Dr. Ishita Khemka, conducted a series of projects, funded by the Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. Foundation, the Williams Syndrome
