

Contents

List of figures	x
List of tables	xi
List of contributors	xii
Acknowledgements	xvi
Introduction: Children's Literature and Childhood Discourses
Anna Cermakova and Michaela Mahlberg	1
1 Sensitive Girls, Purposeful Boys and Embodied Emplacement Catherine Olver and Maria Nikolajeva	11
2 Can Children Read Irony? A Cautionary Tale Peter Stockwell	31
3 The Rhetoric of Orphanhood Marion Gymnich	53
4 Caroline Hewins and Making Space for Books for the Young in American Public Libraries Rebekah Fitzsimmons	73
5 Children's Geographies and (Spatial) Literacy Peter Kraftl	95
6 Revisioning Lewis Carroll's Alice and Their Afterlives Through Male Performance Kiera Vaclavik	111
7 Exploring Representations of Girls and Boys in the Text Printed on Slogan T-Shirts Marianne McKinley	139
8 Discovering What It Means to Be Unladylike in Children's Fiction Anna Cermakova and Michaela Mahlberg	169
9 Gendered Reporting Verbs in the Italian Translation of Harry Potter Lorenzo Mastropierro	193
10 Hegemonic and Counter-Discourses of Happiness Wolfgang Teubert	219
11 Reading Children's Books Aloud Caroline Radcliffe	247
Index	259