

Contents

Abstract

Acknowledgements

List of figures, tables and pictures

Foreword by Russ Palmer

1 INTRODUCTION

1.1 Principles of the research

1.2 Acquiring deafblindness at adult age

1.3 Communication of adults acquiring deafblindness

2 TOUCH AND HAPTICS AS PART OF COMMUNICATION

2.1 Touch as a source of information

2.2 Haptic and tactile

3 BODY IN COMMUNICATION

3.1 Body, movements and spatial experiences

3.2 Body and movements giving feedback

3.3 Transcription systems describing body elements

4 AIMS AND METHODS OF THE RESEARCH

4.1 Purpose and progress of the research

4.2 Issues and approach of the research

4.3 Methods of collecting data

4.4 Processing of data

4.5 Background and communication of the informants

5 ORIGIN AND DESCRIPTION OF SOCIAL-HAPTIC COMMUNICATION

5.1 Touch behaviour as the origin of social-haptic communication

5.1.1 Social quick messages

5.1.2 Environmental and spatial orientation

5.1.3 Expressing the appearance of the object

5.1.4 Drawing onto the body

5.1.5 Guiding with body movements

5.1.6 Expressing arts and hobbies

5.1.7 Movement methods of the body

5.1.8 Special situations of expressing onto the body

5.2 Expanding social-haptic combined information

6 ANALYSIS OF BODY AND MOVEMENTS

6.1 Analysis of feedback behaviour

6.1.1 Analysis of feedback signals

6.1.2 Body and movement elements in feedback signals

6.1.3 Towards holistic social-haptic confirmation system

6.2 Analysing emotions, facial expressions and behaviour

6.2.1 Emotions with feedback signals

6.2.2 Expressions of emotions and behaviour

6.3 Additional social-haptic communication

- 6.3.1 Contact and reality information
- 6.3.2 Iconic touch and pointers
- 6.3.3 Markers of spatial body description
- 6.3.4 Body movements and sequences of movements in guiding
- 6.3.5 Body elements related to arts and hobbies
- 6.3.6 Holistic body movements

7 DEVELOPMENT OF HAPTICES AND HAPTEMES

- 7.1 Social-haptic communication consists of haptices and haptemes
- 7.2 Haptices and haptemes and spoken/Sign language
- 7.3 Finding haptices and haptemes
- 7.4 Experiences from educating on haptices and haptemes

8 CONCLUSIONS

REFERENCES

APPENDICES

- Appendix 1. Material and informants 1991-2006
 - Table a. Data, title and informants
 - Table b. Informants
- Appendix 2. Confirmation with deafblind people
- Appendix 3. Lectures, workshops, conferences and articles 1991-2007
- Appendix 4. Touch behaviour observations 1991-2004 by informants
- Appendix 5. Social quick messages
- Appendix 6. Senses and touch when initiating and finishing contact
- Appendix 7. Table a. Comparison of the confirmations and haptic elements
 - Table b. Body areas and locations when giving and receiving confirmation
 - Table c. Direction of confirmation
 - Table d. Body postures
 - Table e. Body orientation and position levels
 - Table f. Communication distance vertically and horizontally
 - Table g. Confirmations and territories
- Appendix 8. Summary of guiding messages
- Appendix 9. Summary of haptices and haptemes