

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Abbreviations	ix
Actors	xi
About the Authors	xiii
 1. Introduction	 1
1.1 Government capture, from the inside	7
1.2 International public service media	10
1.3 Resisting government capture	14
1.4 Building theory	16
1.5 Conclusion	20
1.6 Map of the book	20
 2. The Voice of America: A history of conflict	 27
2.1 War, peace, and the McCarthy witch hunts	28
2.2 The Cold War and VOA's Charter	33
2.3 Managerial purges in the Reagan and first Bush administrations	38
2.4 The firewall and the War on Terror: From the Clinton era to the second Bush administration	44
2.5 Transferring authority to a single political appointee	49
2.6 Conclusion	56
 3. Capturing public service media around the world	 57
3.1 Government capture and the politicization of the BBC	58
3.2 Capturing PSM in Europe	64
3.3 Capturing international PSM in Japan and Turkey	69
3.4 Journalistic resistance in Slovakia and South Africa	76
3.5 Analyzing "messy" capture in a hybrid media system using critical realism	81
3.6 Conclusion	87
 4. Indirect capture	 89
4.1 Governance capture: "Purge and stack"	90
4.2 Resource capture and the bureaucratic bottleneck	98
4.3 Discursive capture: Spies, swamps, and the lost "glory days" of the Cold War	109
4.4 Creating "status threats" through networked discursive capture	116
4.5 Conclusion	123

5. Direct editorial interventions	126
5.1 The hot-button issue of government editorials	128
5.2 False equivalence and the Black Lives Matter protests	131
5.3 Internal disciplinary capture: Investigating “biased” election reporting	138
5.4 Investigating individual journalists and rescinding the firewall rule	144
5.5 Why self-censorship varied across the network	150
5.6 Conclusion	157
6. The post-election endgame	160
6.1 Formalization and centralization	162
6.2 Intensifying the politicization of VOA’s governance structure	169
6.3 “Blowing up the newsroom”: The Pompeo incident and its aftermath	173
6.4 Uncertainty and the January 6 insurrection	179
6.5 Conclusion	184
7. Resistance strategies and ongoing harm	187
7.1 Considering resistance	189
7.2 Resistance strategies used by news staff	194
7.3 “Hidden transcripts” and bureaucratic sabotage	203
7.4 Ongoing harm and the need to act	208
7.5 Conclusion	213
8. Conclusion	215
8.1 Capturing VOA indirectly	218
8.2 Direct editorial influence	223
8.3 Journalistic self-censorship	228
8.4 Advancing research into media capture	232
8.5 Taking action	235
Notes	243
References	247
Index	279