

Contents

List of Illustrations, Figures and Tables	vii
Preface	xi
INTRODUCTION
Class and social formations: metatheoretical implications of this study	3
Theory of classes and class formations	6
Theory of social formations	12
Theory of social change	18
Research design and plan of the book	24
1. FAMILY AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION
The Hungarian case	28
Socialist countries in the postindustrial epoch	28
Changes in the extent of family production, 1972–82	32
Agricultural commodity production within the family enterprise: concentration of production	38
2. ALTERNATIVE THEORIES OF FAMILY PRODUCTION
The proletarianization theory	42
The peasant-worker theory	45
The “interrupted embourgeoisement” theory	50
3. THE “INTERRUPTED EMBOURGEOISEMENT” THEORY REFORMULATED
Some hypotheses	61
The changing class map of state socialism: how many destinations?	61
Life history as mediator of family background	65
Identifying “parking orbits”	73

4. THE FOUR DESTINATIONS
An ethnography of household economies	77
Distinguishing entrepreneurs from peasant-workers	78
Rural cadre and proletarian households	91
Toward a typology of peasant-workers and entrepreneurs	93
5. MEASURING THE FOUR DESTINATIONS	114
Distribution of the rural population among the four destinations	114
Developing a sample selection model	120
6. HISTORICAL CONTINUITY IN EMBOURGEOISEMENT
The effect of family background	146
The social origins of entrepreneurs, peasant-workers, and proletarians	146
Retesting the sample selection model	159
7. BEYOND FAMILY INHERITANCE
The importance of life history for the reemergence of embourgeoisement	170
Toward a typology of life histories	171
Retesting the sample selection model	192
8. CONCLUSIONS	207
Empirical findings: the interrupted embourgeoisement theory supported	207
An ironic view of the Third Road	212
The silent revolution from below: recent changes in East European class structure	214
APPENDIX A
Methodological notes	221
APPENDIX B
Variables, means, and standard deviations of variables used in regression models	229
References	235
Index	249