CHAPTER I

The Battle on Environmental Policy Competences;
Challenging the Stricter Approach: Stricter Might Lead to Weaker Protection

Peter Pagh

I	Introduction: The Dispute on Competence	3
II	Challenging the Stricter Approach	5
II.1	The Derogation Clauses of the EC Treaty	5
II.1.1	The Environmental Guarantee Clause (Article 95)	5
II.1.2	Empirical Experience with the Use of Article 176	8
II.2	The Application of the "Stricter Approach" in Court cases	8
II.3	The "Stricter Approach" keeps environmental protection as an internal national matter	10
II.4	Stricter Measures and Extraterritorial Demands	11
II.4.1	Imposing National Standards on Other Member States By Import Restrictions	12
II.4.2	Imposing National Standards on Other Jurisdictions by Export Restrictions	12
III	Summary: Six Objections to the "Stricter Approach"	15

CHAPTER 2

Environmental Principles

Astrid Epiney

I	Introduction	19
II	The Legally Binding Character of Environmental Principles	20
III	Legal Effects of Environmental Principles	22
III.1	"Global Objectives"	23
III.1.1	Article 174(1)	24
III.1.2	Sustainable development	26
III.1.3	Article 174(2)(1)	27
III.1.4	Conclusion	29
III.2	Obligations to "Take Into Account"	29
III.3	Obligations Referring to the Result	30
III.3.1	The Degree of Precision of Articles 174(2)(2) and 6	30
III.3.2	Point of Reference: Definition of the Contents of Environmental Measures	31
III.3.3	Legal Implications/obligation	33
III.3.4	Résumé: Some General Principles as to the Legal Implications of "Obligations Referring to the Result"	36
IV	Summary conclusion	38

CHAPTER 3	Environmental Impact Assessment in EC Law; A Critical Appraisal
	Angel-Manuel Moreno
I	Introduction	43
II	Controversial Aspects of Directive 85/337 in the Case-law of the Court	44
II.1	The Possible Direct Effect of the Directive	44
II.2	Connections between EIA and the Authorisation of the Project	47
II.3	The Projects Covered by the Directive	49
II.4	Exceptions Allowed by the Directive	50
III	The Main Weaknesses of Directive 85/337	52
III.1	Loose Procedural Requirements	52
III.2	Lack of Substantive Standards of the EIA	52
III.3	Same Assessment Procedure for Public and Private Projects	52
III.4	Effects of EIA on the Authorisation	53
IV	Strategic Assessment in EC law	53
IV.1	Rationale for SEA	53
IV.2	Main Requirements of the SEA Directive	55
V	The Performance of Member States	57
VI	Conclusions	58
CHAPTER 4	Public Information and Participation in EC Environmental Law; Origins, Milestones and Trends
	Jerzy Jendroska
I	Background to the Development of the Aarhus Convention	63
II	Different Conceptual Roots	64
II.1	Protection of Property Rights	65
II.2	Democratization	65
II.3	Good Governance	65
II.4	Effectiveness of Environmental Protection	66
II.5	Protection of the Right to an Environment	66
II.6	Consequences	67
III	Milestones	67
III.1	The Environment Impact Assessment Directive of 1985	67
III.2	Access to Information Directive of 1990	68
III.3	IPPC Directive of 1996	68
III.4	The Aarhus Convention of 1998 and its Follow-up	69
IV	The Aarhus Convention – A Breakthrough	70
IV.1	The Process	70
IV.2	Approaches to Negotiations	71

IV.3	Scope of the Convention	71
V	Access to Information after Aarhus Convention	72
V.1	Passive and Active Dissemination of Information	72
V.2	The New Directive on Access to Information: A Step Ahead	73
V.3	PRTR and EPER	74
VI	Public Participation after Aarhus Convention	75
VI.1	Ladder of Public Participation	75
VI.2	Specific Decisions	75
VI.3	Plans and Programmes	76
VI.4	Policies and Legislative Proposals	76
VI.5	Legal Nature of Obligations	76
VI.6	Implementation in the EU	77
VI.7	Gaps in Implementation?	78
VI.8	Public Participation and Strategic Environmental Assessment (SEA)	78
VI.9	Public Participation in GMO-related Decisions	79
VII	Access to Justice after Adoption of the Aarhus Convention	80
VII.1	Scope of the Third Pillar	80
VII.2	Actio Popularis	81
VII.3	The Draft Directive on Access to Justice	82
VIII	The Application of the Aarhus Convention to EU Institutions	82
IX	Conclusions	84

CHAPTER 5 The EU and Climate Change
Charlotte Streck & David Freestone

I	The Context	87
II	EU Climate Change Policy before Kyoto	89
II.1	The Environment Action Programmes	89
II.2	Towards a Climate Change Strategy	92
III	The European Union and the Kyoto Protocol	94
IV	Policies and Measures to Reduce Greenhouse Gases: EU Approaches	97
V	Fiscal Measures – The Proposed Carbon Tax	98
VI	Energy Policies; Renewable Energy and Energy Efficiency	100
VI.1	Renewable Energy	100
VI.2	Energy Efficiency	101
VII	The Problem of Transport	102
VIII	The Most Recent Approach: Emissions Trading	103
IX	Conclusions	105

CHAPTER 6	The European Community Eco-labelling Scheme Mar Campins Eritja
I	The Logic of Eco-labelling Schemes	109
II	Background of the European Community Regulation	110
III	The Aims of the EC Eco-labelling Scheme	113
IV	Characteristics of the EC Eco-labelling Scheme	115
V	Key Issues Raised by the Regulation of the EC Eco-labelling Scheme	118
V.1	Participants in the Process	118
V.2	Setting the Eco-label Criteria	119
V.3	The Procedure for Awarding the Label	121
V.3.1	The Applications	121
V.3.2	Assessing the Product and Taking the Decision to Award the Label	122
V.3.3	The Contract Covering the Terms of the Use of the Eco-label	123
VI	Final Remarks	123
CHAPTER 7	Liability Gerhard Roller
I	Introduction	129
II	Product Liability	129
III	The Suitability of Civil Liability Law to Protect the Environment	131
IV	Environmental Liability in EU Law	132
IV.1	First Steps: a Sectoral Approach	132
IV.2	Towards a Horizontal Approach: The Debate on Environmental Liability in the EC	133
IV.2.1	Green Paper	133
IV.2.2	White Paper	134
IV.2.3	The Environmental Liability Directive	134
V	Evaluation and Outlook	139
CHAPTER 8	Competition and Environment: An Ecologically Rational Agreement Caroline London
I	Agreements for an Increased Industrial Involvement	143
I.1	Environmental Agreements	143
I.1.1	The Commission's Position	144
I.1.2	Compatibility with Competition Rules	146
I.2	Associations of Enterprises for Packaging Recovery	148

I.2.1	The Different Undertakings	148
I.2.2	Conditions to be Complied with	150
II	State Aids to Promote Environmental Innovation	151
II.1	Guidelines	151
II.1.1	1974 to 1994	151
II.1.2	The 2001 Guidelines	152
II.2	Examples	154

III	Dominant Positions for a Task of General Interest	155
III.1	Justification of a Dominant Position	156
III.2	Prohibition of Abuse	157
CHAPTER 9	Integration of Environmental Requirements into EC Energy Policy Florian Ermacora
I	Introduction	161
II	Legislative Initiatives	163
II.1	Measures on the Energy Demand Side	163
II.1.1	Strengthening Energy Efficiency	163
II.1.2	Taxation of Energy Products and Electricity	168
II.2	Measures on the Energy Supply Side	169
II.2.1	Promotion of Electricity Produced from Renewable Energy Sources	169
II.2.2	Limits in EC law for the Promotion of Renewable Energies	171
II.2.3	Substitution of Fossil Fuels	174
III	Environmental Protection and Nuclear Energy	175
III.1	Legal and Political Questions	175
III.2	Safety of Nuclear Installations	176
III.3	Management and Stockpiling of Nuclear Waste	178
IV	Outlook	179
CHAPTER 10	Integration of Environmental Considerations into Transport Said Mahmoudi
I	Introduction	185
II	Development of Integration of Environmental Considerations into Transport	187
III	Current Issues and a View of the Future	192

CHAPTER II EC Chemicals Legislation: A Horizontal Perspective
 Marc Pallemmaerts

I	The Present State of Chemicals Regulation in the EC	199
II	Development and Testing of Chemicals	202
III	Import	205
IV	Production	207
IV.1	Process Emissions to Water	209
IV.2	Process Emissions to Air	211
IV.3	Storage	212
IV.4	Transport	213
IV.5	Use in Processes	214
V	Packaging and Labelling	217
VI	Marketing	218
VII	Use in Preparations or Other Products	221
VIII	Exports as or in Products	222
IX	Diffuse Use Emissions	224
X	Disposal as or in Waste	225
X.1	Emissions from Waste Disposal	226
X.2	Export as or in Waste	227
XI	Overview and Conclusions	228

CHAPTER I2 Products and the Environment
 Marco Onida

I	Introduction	235
II	The Impact of Products on the Environment: Relevant Factors	236
III	The Strategic Approach to Environmental Product Policy in the Past 30 Years	238
III.1	Introduction	238
III.2	Products in the Environmental Action Programmes	238
III.3	Products and the Internal Market	244
IV	Present Approaches and Perspectives	249
IV.1	“Horizontal” Approaches to Products and the Environment	250
IV.1.1	Integrated Product Policy (IPP)	251
IV.1.2	Sustainable Use of Natural Resources	251
IV.1.3	Environmental Technologies Action Plan (ETAP)	252
IV.1.4	Standardisation	252
IV.1.5	Voluntary Agreements	254
IV.2	Specific or Targeted Approaches to Products and the Environment	258
IV.2.1	Chemicals	258

IV.2.2	Waste Legislation	259
IV.2.3	The Proposed Directive on Energy-using Products	262
IV.2.4	The Community Eco-label System	264
V	Some Concluding Remarks	266
 CHAPTER 13	 Transnational Law Making and EC Product Policy; The Example of Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) Martin Führ
I	Introduction	273
II	Cross Border Product Responsibility as a New Challenge	274
III	Interface Problems on Different Levels	275
III.1	Practical Interfaces: The Monitoring System (Directive 2002/96, Article 12(1))	275
III.1.1	Data to be Notified, When EEE is put on the Market	276
III.1.2	Data to be Notified, When EEE is given back as WEEE	277
III.2	Conclusion with Respect to the Different Interfaces	278
III.3	Requirements for an Appropriate Legal and Institutional Framework	279
IV	Reciprocal Transnational Legal Obligations	281
V	Recommendations Concerning the Legal and Institutional Framework	282
