

Contents

1	Introduction: ‘It’s...Changed Everything’	1
1.1	Disclosing Online: Practices, Platforms, and Approaches	3
1.2	Informal Justice in Digital Society	7
1.3	Methodological Approach	8
1.4	A Note on Terminology	9
1.5	Structure of the Book	10
	References	11
 Part I Speaking out Online
2	Disclosing as Storytelling, Activism, or Justice?	17
2.1	Narrating Rape: Storytelling and Power in the Context of Sexual Violence	18
2.1.1	Belief and Witnessing: How Are Disclosures Heard, and by Whom?	21
2.2	Digital Connections: Using Anonymity and Forming Communities	23
2.2.1	Digital Speak-Outs: Public Storytelling, Justice, and Activism	26
2.3	Safety Work: Staying Safe On- and Off-Line	29
2.4	Conclusion: The Politics of ‘Speaking Out’ Online	31
	References	32
3	Space, Platform, Privacy: Deciding How and Where to Disclose	37
3.1	Understanding How Victim-Survivors Use Digital Platforms: Privacy, Anonymity, and Constructing ‘Safe Spaces’	39
3.1.1	Navigating Risk of Further Harms	40
3.2	Distinguishing Between Public and Private Disclosures	44
3.2.1	Disclosing in Private and Seeking Safe Spaces	45
3.2.2	‘It Can Be Dangerous’: Disclosing Publicly and Naming Perpetrators	49

3.3	Conclusion: Navigating Digital Divides in the Aftermath of Sexual Violence	52
	References	56
4	The Politics of ‘Speaking In’: Forming Online Survivor Communities	59
4.1	Speaking In: Seeking Connection in Online Communities	60
4.1.1	Support and Isolation: Belonging in Online Communities ..	61
4.1.2	Information and Advice: Online Communities, Trust, and a Space for ‘Trauma Talk’	65
4.2	Labelling Experiences and Countering Narratives: New Genres That Emerge from ‘Speaking In’	67
4.2.1	Speaking In to Peers: Navigating Potential Audiences and Sites of Storytelling	70
4.2.2	The Importance of Anonymity in Online Communities: Freedom to be Heard and Supported	73
4.3	The Politics of Speaking In	74
4.4	Conclusion: Speaking In and Implications for Justice	76
	References	77
 Part II Rape Justice in Digital Society
5	(Digital) Justice from the Victim’s Perspective	83
5.1	‘Justice’ After Sexual Violence	84
5.1.1	Online Disclosures and Justice Needs	86
5.2	‘A Very Passive Kind of Storytelling’: Comparing Procedural Justice with Online Disclosures	90
5.2.1	‘It’s Very Clinical’: Perspectives of Victim-Survivors Who Chose to Report	90
5.2.2	‘Nobody’s Going to Question the Small Details’: Perspectives of Victim-Survivors Who Chose Not to Report ..	92
5.3	Kaleidoscopic Justice: Victim-Survivors’ Perceptions of Informal Justice-Seeking Practices	95
5.4	Conclusion: What Is Justice?	98
	References	99
6	Navigating Individual Justice: Deconstructing Neoliberalism, Trauma and Revenge	103
6.1	Neoliberalism and Online Disclosures: Shaping Individual Victim-Survivors Who Speak Out	104
6.2	Trauma and Justice: Enmeshed Discourses and Blurred Outcomes	108
6.2.1	(Mis)recognition in Digital Society: Where Trauma Meets Justice	110
6.3	Rape Culture and Revenge Myths	114

6.3.1 Naming Perpetrators to Heal: Justice Beyond
‘Digilantism’ 117

6.4 Conclusion 119

References..... 121

7 Communities and Multiplicities of Informal Justice 125

7.1 Digital Storytelling and Collective Witnessing:
Online Communities as Sites of Informal Justice 126

7.2 Speaking Out and Social Justice: Public Testimonies and Online Activism as Justice 131

7.3 Examining Online Counterpublic: Implications for Victim-Survivors’ Informal Justice Practices..... 134

7.4 Multiplicities of Justice: Navigating the Aftermath of Sexual Violence in Digital Society 137

7.5 Conclusion: The Multiplicity of Informal Justice 140

References..... 141

8 Conclusion: ‘Hope Endures’ 145

8.1 Navigating Safety in Digital Society 147

8.2 Speaking Out, Speaking In?..... 148

8.3 Recognising Informal Justice..... 149

8.4 Concluding Remarks: Future Directions and a Final Hope..... 152

References..... 155

Index..... 159