

CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	5
ABBREVIATIONS	7
SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY	9
INTRODUCTION	21
CHAPTER I: Giuseppe Garampi's Youth and Education in his Native City, Rimini (1725-1746)	31
I.1. The Intellectual Renaissance on the Italian Peninsula	31
I.2. Giuseppe's Models: his Brother Francesco, Giovanni Bianchi and Annibale degli Abbatì Olivieri	34
CHAPTER II: First Years in the Rome of Benedict XIV (1746-1751)	54
II.1. Introduction	54
II.2. Garampi becomes a Church Historian, and Adjunct Archivist in the Archivio Segreto Vaticano	55
CHAPTER III: The Impact of Diplomatic Missions on the Archivist of the Archivio Segreto Vaticano (1751-1772)	77
III.1. Introduction	77
III.2. Garampi in the Service of Clement XIII (1758-1769)	80
III.3. Travels North of the Alps (1761-1763 and 1764)	82
III.4. The Pivot of an „anti-Febronius” Network	106

III.5. In the Service of the Secretariat of State	112
III.6. The Years under Clement XIV (1769-1774)	117
 CHAPTER IV: Garampi as Nuncio in Warsaw (1772-1776) and Vienna (1776-1785): a Modern Diplomat in the Service of the Holy See
IV.1. The Difficult Years in a Lacerated Poland (1772-1776)	137
IV.2. The Canny Ultramontane and the Josephine Stronghold (1776-1785)	143
2.1. Diplomatic Success in the Reign of Maria Theresa (1776-1780)	143
2.2. The Turnabout under Joseph II (1780-1785)	170
2.3. Giuseppe Garampi: was he really pro-Jesuit and a „Bücherjude“?	192
 CHAPTER V: The Ultramontane Struggle and the Intellectual Altruism of the Cardinal and Bishop (1785-1792)
V.1. Freed of his Political Rheumatism	228
V.2. The Significance of Garampi as Cardinal in the Politics of Church and State	232
2.1. Marked by Frail Health	232
2.2. The Brain behind the Ultramontane 'Internationale' in a Turbulent Period of Revolution and Schism (1786-1792)	235
2.2.1. A Specialist in German Policies on the Church	236
2.2.2. Scipione de'Ricci's Cry of Distress	241
2.2.3. Garampi's Front-Line Informants in Revolutionary Paris and Alsace	248
2.2.4. The Austrian Netherlands and the Brabantine Revolt	258
2.2.5. The Sponsor and Disseminator of Ultramontane Literature	266
V.3. A Cardinal in the Service of Erudition	273
3.1. The Rediscovery of an Old Love: the Etruscans	273
3.2. An Altruistic Authority	274
3.3. The Library of „un uomo universale“ and an Enlightened Ultramontane	277
 CONCLUSION	 299
 INDEX	 309