

Contents

Preface . . . . .	7
More Democracy Is a Precondition for Having a Meaningful Future . . . . .	9
One Hundred Years of Modern Turkey, Tragic Earthquake and Growing Distrust in the World . . . . .	15
Hungary Is Defending Its National Interests, Traditional Values and Normalcy. . . . .	19
Is It Possible and Meaningful to Aim at Re-Humanizing the World? . . . . .	25
We Need World Political Economy, not Geoeconomics . . .	31
A Few Words on the Situation in and around Israel . . . . .	37
Notes on the Russia-Ukraine War . . . . .	41
The Economic Challenges of Our Time . . . . .	45
Ukraine and Gaza (or perhaps Russia and Israel). Where to Start? . . . . .	51

In the Middle of the Age of Wars and Conflicts . . . . .	55
The Anglosphere and Europe (or perhaps “Anglospherism and Europeism”?) . . . . .	59
Not Individual Migration, But Mass Migration Is the Problem . . . . .	67
On the Assassination Attempt on Donald Trump . . . . .	71
Political Reflections in the Middle of a Hot Summer . . . . .	73
Is the EU 20 Years after Our Entry Greater? . . . . .	77
A Few Remarks on the Nation-State Sovereignty and the Concept of Europe of Nations . . . . .	81
Václav Klaus Institute on Donald Trump’s Election Victory .	91
20 Years in the EU: Czech and Polish Experience . . . . .	93
A World Order Under Threat. Is There Any Chance to Change It? . . . . .	101
Notes for Davos: “Expecting the Unexpected” . . . . .	107
Building Bridges in a Divided Society . . . . .	111
From Munich with Scepticism: War, Economics, and Uncertain Future . . . . .	115
Can We Avoid Wasting the Unique Opportunity Offered to Us by Trump’s Presidency? . . . . .	119