

Contents

List of Figures	ix
List of Tables	xii
List of Contributors	xiv
1. Introduction	1
Mónica Ferrín and Hanspeter Kriesi
2. The challenges of repeat measurement in times of the COVID-19 pandemic	29
Ruxandra Comanaru and Rory Fitzgerald
PART I. VIEWS OF DEMOCRACY
3. Stability and change in Europeans’ views of democracy	55
Enrique Hernández
4. Populism as an alternative model of democracy: Measuring and profiling the supporters of the populist model	79
Mónica Ferrín and Levente Littvay
5. Stability and change in the structure of Europeans’ views of democracy	104
Hanspeter Kriesi
6. The correlates of European citizens’ views of democracy	127
Besir Ceka and Pedro C. Magalhães
PART II. EVALUATIONS OF DEMOCRACY
7. Changes in Europeans’ evaluation of democracy	157
Claudia Landwehr and Armin Schäfer
8. The evaluation of democratic performance from a comparative longitudinal perspective	179
Mariano Torcal and Alexander H. Trechsel

9. The relationship between views and evaluations of democracy	206
Irene Palacios
10. Stability and change—legitimacy and populism	230
Bernhard Weßels
 PART III. ADDITIONAL QUESTIONS GOING BEYOND VIEWS AND EVALUATIONS
11. Support for democracy and support for autocracy: Two sides of the same coin?	253
Sergio Martini
12. Political legitimacy and satisfaction with democracy in Europe	279
Michał Kotnarowski and Radosław Markowski
13. Democratic views and voting behavior	295
Mónica Ferrín, Enrique Hernández, and Pedro Riera
14. Conclusion: For Europeans, democracy is alright	318
Félix Lévesque and Dietlind Stolle
 Index	 338

Oxford University Press has created a website to accompany How Europeans View and Evaluate Democracy Revisited: Ten Years Later. Materials that cannot be made available in a book, namely an online appendix, are provided here. The reader is encouraged to consult this resource in conjunction with the chapters.

The companion website can be accessed by searching for this book in our online catalogue <https://global.oup.com/academic>. From the book’s webpage you can follow the link to the companion website.