

Contents

Illustrations	xiii
Acknowledgements	xv
The Wittgenstein-Iwanowsky Family Tree	xviii

PROLOGUE

A Giant in Lilliput	3
----------------------------	---

BOOK ONE: NEW BEGINNINGS, 1847–1848

Enter Carolyne von Sayn-Wittgenstein	25
---	----

The character of Carolyne Iwanowska ~ her childhood in the Ukraine ~ her relationship with her mother and father ~ her marriage to Prince Nicholas von Sayn-Wittgenstein ~ the death of her father, Peter Iwanowsky ~ Carolyne inherits a fortune ~ the château Woronince ~ Liszt meets Carolyne in Kiev, February 1847 ~ he visits her in Woronince ~ he is introduced to her daughter, Princess Marie, and her husband, Prince Nicholas.

The Journeys of the Princess, 1847–1848	35
--	----

Chronicles of an adventure ~ a winter journey ~ a sojourn in St. Petersburg ~ she hears the music of Berlioz ~ growing love for Liszt ~ Carolyne and Liszt meet again in Odessa, July 1847 ~ Liszt gives his "farewell" concert in Elisabetgrad, September 1847 ~ the lovers of Woronince ~ Glances de Woronince ~ Liszt sets out for Weimar ~ Carolyne leaves for Kiev to sell her estates ~ farewell to the Ukraine ~ Liszt and Carolyne are re-united at Kryzanowicz.

Funérailles, 1848–1849	58
-------------------------------	----

The seeds of the '48 revolutions ~ the awakening of Hungarian nationalism ~ Széchenyi, Kossuth, and Batthyány ~ the Hungarian war of independence ~ the evacuation of Pest ~ the victories of General Artúr Görgey ~ the Hungarian Declaration of Independence ~ Pest re-taken ~ the Russian intervention, June 1849 ~ the surrender at Világos ~ Batthyány executed ~ Kossuth goes into exile ~ Liszt and Carolyne travel to Vienna and Eisenstadt ~ a visit to Father Albach ~ Liszt's attitude to the war of independence ~ Heine's poem against Liszt, Im Oktober 1849 ~ Funérailles, October 1849 ~ Liszt and Carolyne take up residence in Weimar.

The Altenburg

74

A history of the Altenburg ~ the ownership of the house ~ a description of its interior ~ the household staff ~ Liszt's domestic routine ~ social life at the Altenburg ~ Carolyne's difficulties with the Weimar Court ~ her liaison with Liszt criticized ~ Liszt in trouble with the law: "The Weimarers are all donkeys" ~ the Altenburg becomes a Mecca for modern music.

BOOK TWO: COURT AND KAPELLMEISTER, 1848-1853

Music at the Court of Weimar

91

Weimar in the time of Grand Duke Carl August ~ "the Athens of the North" ~ Goethe and Schiller ~ Liszt's first visit to Weimar, November 1841 ~ he becomes Weimar's Kapellmeister in Extraordinary, November 1842 ~ his fledgling attempts at conducting ~ the poor state of the Weimar orchestra and opera house ~ Liszt's struggles with the bureaucracy ~ his relations with Hereditary Grand Duke Carl Alexander.

The Years of Struggle I, 1849-1852

112

Liszt and Wagner ~ Wagner and the Dresden insurrection, May 1849 ~ Liszt performs Tannhäuser and takes up Wagner's cause ~ the Goethe Festival, August 1849 ~ the Herder Festival, August 1850 ~ Liszt gives the world première of Wagner's Lohengrin ~ he proposes a Goethe Foundation in Weimar ~ Wagner's critique of that idea ~ Hans Christian Andersen visits Weimar ~ Liszt and the "black-cloaked witch" ~ Liszt on the Weimar podium.

The Years of Struggle II, 1849-1853

135

Liszt takes stock of his position ~ he conducts Beethoven's Ninth at the Ballenstedt Festival ~ a visit to Braunschweig ~ the illnesses of Princess Carolyne ~ her treatments at Bad Eilsen ~ an encounter with Clara Schumann ~ Prince Nicholas visits Weimar ~ he and Carolyne draw up a property settlement ~ Carolyne's dispute with Tsar Nicholas I ~ Princess Marie is confirmed in Weimar ~ Anna Liszt visits Weimar ~ Liszt's piano compositions of the early Weimar years ~ he revises the pieces of his Glanzzeit ~ Liszt and the Piano Sonata in B minor and its dedication to Schumann ~ Liszt and the Weimar organists ~ he studies the music of J. S. Bach ~ "Ad nos, ad salutarem undam" ~ the first "Berlioz week" ~ more Wagner: Der fliegende Holländer, Tannhäuser, and Lohengrin ~ Liszt complains to Carl Alexander about his working conditions ~ the death of Carl Friedrich intervenes ~ Carl Alexander ascends the throne: "The Word must now become the Deed."

A Gathering of Eagles

167

Liszt and his pupils ~ the "Altenburg eagles" ~ Hans von Bülow and his special relationship to Liszt ~ an account of Bülow's personality ~ Carl Tausig arrives in Weimar ~ his lessons with Liszt and his subsequent career ~ "the boys": Karl Klindworth, Hans von Bronsart, William Mason, and Dionys Pruckner ~ an account of their masterclasses with Liszt ~ Mason's diary ~ Cornelius takes up residence at the Altenburg ~ the "twenty-one steps" ~ Julius Reubke and Alexander Ritter ~ Ritter's championship of the New Music.

The Raff Case 199

Liszt meets Raff in Basel, 1845 ~ together in the Rhineland ~ Raff arrives in Weimar, January 1850 ~ he goes to jail for debt ~ Raff's claim to be Liszt's "collaborator" ~ his correspondence with Kunigunde Heinrich ~ the Raff question today ~ William Mason on Tasso ~ Princess Carolyne on Raff.

Liebestraum 209

Agnès Street-Klindworth arrives in Weimar ~ La Mara's account of her re-examined ~ her connection with Liszt ~ her family background and her role in the espionage network run by her father, Georg Klindworth ~ the uncensored letters of Liszt to Agnès reveal his emotional attachment to her ~ their trysts in Cologne and Berlin, 1855 ~ Agnès's relationship with Ferdinand Lassalle ~ they are trailed by the secret police ~ the death of their daughter, Fernande ~ Princess Carolyne and the aftermath of the Agnès affair ~ Agnès dies in Paris in 1906.

BOOK THREE: THE YEARS OF MATURITY, 1853–1857

Growing Achievements, 1853–1855 227

The Altenburg matinées ~ the "Society of Murls" ~ Brahms at the Altenburg ~ Liszt visits Wagner in Zürich ~ the Karlsruhe festival ~ Liszt and the Murls visit Wagner in Basel ~ Wagner reads them the Nibelungen poem ~ Liszt's sojourn in Paris ~ he is re-united with his three children ~ Liszt's deepening relationship with Wagner ~ the latter's impecunity ~ the nature of Liszt's material and artistic help ~ Liszt's attempts to secure Wagner's amnesty ~ Hoffmann von Fallersleben takes up residence in Weimar ~ the Rotterdam Music Festival, 1854 ~ meetings with Anton Rubinstein ~ George Eliot at the Altenburg ~ her "Three Months in Weimar" ~ Liszt founds the Neu-Weimar-Verein ~ its constitution and its membership ~ the second "Berlioz week," February 1855 ~ a banquet for Berlioz ~ deteriorating relations with Rubinstein ~ the thirty-third Lower Rhine Festival in Düsseldorf ~ another encounter with Clara Schumann ~ Liszt and America ~ the inauguration of the Merseburg organ, September 1855 ~ Liszt conducts in Brunswick ~ Liszt conducts in Berlin ~ his Thirteenth Psalm ~ the Berlin production of Tannhäuser ~ lengthening shadows.

Liszt the Conductor 270

His rehearsal methods considered ~ comparison with other conductors ~ the low quality of European orchestras in general ~ the outcast "profession" of musician ~ Liszt's reforms on the podium ~ he directs the Karlsruhe festival and attracts criticism ~ he replies with his "Manifesto" on conducting ~ Liszt's conducting career reviewed ~ his failures in Leipzig and Dresden ~ Liszt's legacy.

Liszt and the Orchestra 300

The general reception of Liszt's orchestral works ~ his Weimar output ~ the origins of the symphonic poem ~ Liszt and "programme music" ~ the role of the prefaces in the understanding of the symphonic poems, and Carolyne's literary contribution ~ the prophetic nature of the orchestral works ~ the "metamorphosis of themes" technique ~ Liszt's quest for orchestral colour ~ his treatment of the various instruments ~ the influence on him of the Weimar virtuosi: Nabich, Joachim, Cossmann, and Eyth ~ the structure of the symphonic poems ~ Liszt and cuts ~ some "cuffs for cowardly ears" ~ Liszt, Goethe, and the Faust Symphony ~ the influence of Liszt on later composers.

The War of the Romantics

338

Seeds of dissension ~ Leipzig versus Weimar ~ the changing role of the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik ~ the growing hostility of the Schumanns ~ Joachim and Brahms join the Schumann camp ~ the "Manifesto" of Brahms and Joachim against the New German School ~ the role of Wagner in the "war" ~ his accounts in Mein Leben ~ the impact of Das Judenthum in der Musik (1850) ~ the aesthetic issues of the "war" ~ programme music versus absolute music ~ the emergence of Hanslick ~ Hanslick's book Vom Musikalisch-Schönen (1854) ~ Brendel and Bronsart as champions of the New German School ~ Richard Pohl as "Hoplit" ~ the "war" in perspective.

The Scribe of Weimar

368

Liszt as author ~ his writings compared with those of Berlioz and Wagner ~ the authenticity of Liszt's articles questioned ~ a review of the Liszt holographs ~ Liszt's view of himself as an author ~ Marie Wittgenstein's eye-witness testimony ~ Liszt's books on Chopin and Des Bohémiens considered ~ the controversy surrounding Des Bohémiens: Magyar or Gypsy music? ~ Simonffy's protest ~ Bartók's defence of Liszt ~ the Jewish question raised in Des Bohémiens ~ Liszt's theoretical picture of music as it emerges from his writings ~ the Artist as Priest: "the Bearer of the Beautiful" ~ Liszt's view of the critic ~ his criticism of criticism ~ "Whence does the critic derive his authority?" ~ Liszt's reply.

Vienna, Gran, and Aachen, 1856–1857

397

Liszt directs the Mozart Centenary Festival in Vienna, January 1856 ~ Hanslick's hostility towards Liszt ~ sojourns in Prague and Dresden ~ Berlioz directs his Damnation of Faust in Weimar ~ Johanna Wagner comes to Weimar ~ Marie Lipsius meets Liszt ~ she hears him play ~ Liszt conducts Beethoven's Ninth at Magdeburg ~ he returns to Hungary and conducts his "Gran" Mass, August 31, 1856 ~ he meets Cardinal Scitovszky, Augusz, Festetics, and other dignitaries in Hungary ~ he is fêted in Pest ~ conducts his Hungaria in the Pest National Theatre ~ the "Gran" Mass performed in Prague ~ Liszt visits Wagner in Zürich, October 1856 ~ he plays the Faust and Dante Symphonies on the piano to Wagner, and parts of Walküre ~ Wagner and Liszt share the direction of a concert in St. Gallen ~ Liszt's performance of the Hammerklavier Sonata ~ Liszt and Carolyne fall ill in Zürich ~ Wagner's Open Letter on "Liszt's Symphonic Poems" ~ Liszt's illness persists: he seeks medical opinion ~ Bülow premières the B-minor Piano Sonata in Berlin, January 1857 ~ the failure of Mazeppa in Leipzig, February 1857 ~ Liszt directs the thirty-fifth Lower Rhine Festival in Aachen ~ Hiller mounts a public demonstration against him ~ Liszt seeks a water-cure in Aachen.

BOOK FOUR: GATHERING STORMS, 1857–1861

Liszt and His Children

425

Their early life with Anna Liszt in Paris ~ their letters to Liszt ~ Blandine and Cosima are enrolled at Madame Bernard's boarding-school ~ a reunion with Marie d'Agoult ~ childhood confessions and fatherly admonitions ~ enter Madame Patersi, "the Great Instructress" ~ the rigour of their daily life under Patersi ~ fresh encounters with Marie d'Agoult ~ they visit La Maison Rose ~ Liszt comes to Paris, October 1853 ~ of dowries and suitors ~ a trip to Brussels ~ "Two hours in a carriage" ~ "A wet rag" ~ Liszt removes his daughters to Berlin, summer 1855 ~ a mother's fury, a father's scorn ~ life in Berlin with the Bülow ~ Cosima and Hans von Bülow fall in love ~ strained relations with Franziska von Bülow ~ Cosima and Hans are married ~ they visit Wagner in Zürich ~ Bülow sight-reads Rheingold and Walküre ~ Blandine meets Emile Ollivier ~ they marry in Florence ~ Emile quarrels with Marie d'Agoult ~ a description of the Olliviers' salon in Paris ~ Ollivier purchases La Moutte ~ Liszt gives his daughters a dowry ~ Daniel Liszt's early childhood in Paris ~ begins his classical studies, age six ~ he is admitted to the Lycée Bonaparte ~ wins the Prix d'Honneur (1856) ~ dinner with Marshal Pélissier ~ Daniel's visits to the Altenburg ~ growing attachment to his father ~ the clergy or the law? ~ Daniel pursues jurisprudence in Vienna.

The Death of Daniel Liszt

474

Daniel is installed in Vienna ~ his university studies ~ friendship with Tausig ~ growing acquaintance with his father's music ~ the "Gran" Mass in Vienna, the symphonic poems in Prague ~ Daniel visits Cosima in Berlin ~ he complains of sickness ~ tuberculosis diagnosed ~ the end approaches ~ he dies in Cosima's arms ~ Liszt's description of Daniel's last hours and the funeral ceremony ~ "Blessed are the dead."

Of Triumph and Tragedy, 1857-1859

480

The Carl August Centenary Festival ~ the Goethe-Schiller monument unveiled ~ the Faust Symphony has its première ~ Dingelstedt makes trouble ~ Des Meisters Bannerschaft ~ the failure of the Dante Symphony in Dresden ~ Sivori plays in Weimar ~ Liszt conducts in Prague, Vienna, and Pest ~ Liszt is admitted as a "confrater" of St. Francis, April 1858 ~ Cornelius and The Barber of Bagdad ~ the fiasco of The Barber ~ Liszt steps down from the Weimar podium ~ the aftermath ~ letters to the press ~ the attitude of Carl Alexander ~ Wagner asks for money ~ Liszt receives an Austrian knighthood ~ the Handel centenary ~ the Tonkünstler-Versammlung meets in Leipzig ~ Maria Pawlowna dies in Weimar ~ "Today Old Weimar is buried in that coffin."

Of Marriage and Divorce

514

Suitors for the hand of Princess Marie ~ the link between Marie's marriage and Carolyne's divorce ~ the Iwanowsky fortune ~ Okraszewsky offers to arrange Carolyne's Russian annulment for 70,000 roubles ~ Marie marries Prince Konstantin Hohenlohe ~ Carolyne journeys to Paris ~ Okraszewsky returns to Weimar with Carolyne's annulment ~ the bishop of Fulda suspends it ~ Carolyne goes to Rome and appeals to the Vatican ~ the Hohenlohes and the Wittgensteins become her adversaries ~ Carolyne's first audience with Pius IX ~ the College of Cardinals upholds Carolyne's annulment.

Liszt Makes a Testament and Leaves Weimar, 1860-1861

529

Liszt petitions Carl Alexander to help Carolyne secure her annulment ~ Tsar Alexander is asked to influence the Russian delegation in Rome ~ Weimar starts to honour Liszt ~ he receives the freedom of the city of Weimar ~ Liszt draws up his will ~ completes six of his most important operatic paraphrases, on works by Verdi, Wagner, and Gounod ~ Cosima gives birth to Daniela and falls ill ~ Carolyne's annulment moves forward ~ Liszt goes to Vienna, where he is confronted by Gustav Hohenlohe and the nuncio to Vienna ~ Liszt in Paris ~ an evening at the Lamartines' ~ he meets Napoleon III, who elevates him to the rank of Commander of the Legion of Honour ~ he sees Marie d'Agoult again ~ he visits Wagner, to whom he plays his B-A-C-H Prelude and Fugue ~ the Liszt-Wagner friendship in decline ~ the Tonkünstler-Versammlung meets in Weimar ~ Liszt closes down the Altenburg and departs for Rome.

Appendix I: The Wills of Liszt and Carolyne von Sayn-Wittgenstein	555
Appendix II: The Vatican's Marriage-File on Liszt and Carolyne Iwanowska	566
Appendix III: Daniel Liszt's Birth Certificate	581
Sources Consulted in the Preparation of Volume II	583
Index	595