

Contents

|                                                                                |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| List of figures                                                         | x   |
| List of tables                                                          | xi  |
| List of abbreviations                                                   | xii |
| Preface and acknowledgements                                            | xiv |
| 1 Planet in peril                                                              | 1   |
| 2 Environmental sociology: key perspectives and controversies                  | 19  |
| 3 Social construction of environmental issues and problems                     | 53  |
| 4 Environmental discourse                                                      | 76  |
| 5 Media and environmental communication                                        | 104 |
| 6 Science, knowledge and environmental problems                                | 126 |
| 7 Risk construction                                                            | 144 |
| 8 Biodiversity loss: the successful “career” of a global environmental problem | 160 |
| 9 Fear of fracking                                                             | 180 |
| 10 Conclusion                                                                  | 196 |
| Notes                                                                   | 204 |
| Name index                                                              | 211 |
| Subject index                                                           | 217 |