

Contents

Acknowledgements	vi
Introduction	1
1 Corporate law, climate change, and financial risk	6
2 Corporate law history, hubris, and failing to assess risk: Trends from the East India Company to Kodak	26
3 The corporate climate I: Coal and politics, the Adani Group of companies, and the emergence of stranded assets	56
4 The corporate climate II: Rio Tinto and the social licence to operate	89
5 The corporate climate III: Long-term risk, superannuation, and the McVeigh case	122
6 The corporate climate IV: Litigation risk, the extension of the duty of care within the climate context, and stranded assets	150
7 The emergence of climate risk and the end of shareholder primacy?	176
8 Recasting corporate law theory: Emerging possibilities in the epoch of the climate emergency	195
9 The sustainable corporation in the epoch of net zero	215
10 Conclusion: The challenge for corporate law in the age of the climate emergency	244
Index	263