

Contents

Acknowledgments xi

Introduction: Seeing and Believing 1
KERRY TREMAIN

Photographers

Hansel Mieth: The Depression and the Early Days of Life 15

Walter Rosenblum: Lewis Hine, Paul Strand, and the
Photo League 24

Michelle Vignes: Magnum Photo Agency: The Early Years 37

Wayne Miller: World War II and the Family of Man 44

Peter Magubane: A Black Photographer in Apartheid
South Africa 54

Matt Herron: The Civil Rights Movement and the Southern Documentary Project 62

Jill Freedman: Resurrection City 72

Mary Ellen Mark: Streetwise Photographer 79

- Earl Dotter: The United Mine Workers 84
- Eugene Richards: Americans We 90
- Susan Meiselas: Central America and Human Rights 99
- Sebastião Salgado: Workers 108
- Graciela Iturbide: The Indigenous of Mexico 117
- Antonin Kratochvil: The Fall of the Iron Curtain 124
- Donna Ferrato: Living with the Enemy: Domestic Violence 132
- Joseph Rodriguez: In the Barrio 140
- Dayanita Singh: A Truer India 148
- Fazal Sheikh: Portrait of a Refugee 153

Editors and Curators

- Gifford Hampshire: The Environmental Protection Agency's Project DOCUMERICA 163
- Peter Howe: Life Magazine and Outtakes 172
- Colin Jacobson: Independent Magazine and Reportage 178
- Anne Wilkes Tucker: The Museum Context 183
- Fred Ritchin: The Fish are Last to Know about the Water: The Emerging Digital Revolution 188

In the Field

- Rondal Partridge: Dorothea Lange in the Field 203
- Don McCullin: Vietnam: The Battle of Hue, 1968 210

Bill Owens: Suburbia and a Passion for Seeing His World 226

Larry Fink: Social Graces 234

David Goldblatt: Once an Enemy: Apartheid and the
New South Africa 242

Maya Goded: Tierra Negra 251

Afterword: Witness in Our Time 259

KEN LIGHT

Bibliography 273

Important Readings 278

Index 000

The Witness in Our Time would not have been possible without the support, comments, discussion, and editing by Melanie Light, my wife and partner. She generously allowed me to bounce ideas off of her, argue with her, and always gave wise, thoughtful feedback despite my stubbornness. Without her support this book would not have been possible. My daughter, Allison, was always present with a smile and a "How was your day, Daddy?" and then attentively listened to my reply, which is a wonderful gift from a teenager busy with her own active world.

A generous grant from the Erna and Victor Hasselblad Foundation originally supported my travel and my time to conduct interviews with the photographers, and a grant from the National Press Photographers Research Foundation (NPPA) gave a much-needed boost. Without this support I might have never originally undertaken this project.

The first edition could not have happened without my colleague and co-conspirator Kerry Tremaine, nor would it be in its present narrative form, or graced with such an insightful introduction. As we began this updated edition, Kerry's original introduction still rang true. The research he did for the first edition, and his collaboration on the biographies that introduce those interviews made the 2000 edition more readable. Our conversations and his editing skills, passion, and faith in the ideals of documentary photography were a welcome breath of fresh air and made a critical contribution to the book's final form.