

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
List of Abbreviations	xiii
Introduction	xv
1. Eschewing Special Rights	1
1.1 Introduction	1
1.2 The Pitfalls of Special Rights	1
1.2.1 A taxonomy of special-rights dangers	3
1.2.2 Recommendations for children's advocates in the United States	6
1.3 CRC as Embodiment of the Special Rights Fallacy	7
1.3.1 Overarching problems with the CRC	8
1.3.1.1 Children as objects of others' rights	8
1.3.1.2 Police power decision-making about central aspects of children's lives	12
1.3.2 Problematic provisions in the CRC	15
1.4 Advantages of Invoking General Human Rights	19
1.5 Conclusion	25
2. The Right to Emigrate	26
2.1 Introduction	26
2.2 The Right to Emigrate in International Law	27
2.3 Other Relevant General Human Rights	31
2.4 Theoretical Underpinnings of the Right to Emigrate	35
2.5 Conditions for Having a Right to Emigrate	43
2.5.1 Must one be suffering for the indirect bases of a right to emigrate to work?	43
2.5.2 If one is suffering, must there be no domestic solution?	45
2.6 Conclusion	49
3. Justifications for Infringing the Right to Leave	50
3.1 Introduction	50
3.2 Justifications Recognized under International Law	50
3.2.1 The Siracusa Principles	51
3.2.2 Adjudication of obstacles to exit	54
3.3 Critical Assessment of Particular Justifications	55
3.3.1 Protecting the rest of the world	56
3.3.2 Protecting the home state's interests	57
3.3.2.1 Debt to society	57

3.3.2.2	Gratuitous financial gain	63
3.3.2.3	National pride	63
3.3.2.4	Preventing neocolonialism	64
3.3.3	Protecting those left behind	66
3.3.3.1	General welfare of persons in poor nations	66
3.3.3.2	Rights of individuals left behind	70
3.3.4	Paternalistic protection of the would-be emigree	77
3.3.4.1	Protecting a person from violation of other human rights	77
3.3.4.2	Mistreatment in receiving countries	81
3.3.4.3	Loss of culture	84
3.3.4.4	Loss of family ties	89
3.4	Conclusion	93
4.	Citizenship as Liability	95
4.1	Introduction	95
4.2	The Value of Citizenship	97
4.2.1	The human right to nationality	98
4.2.2	The benefits of belonging	102
4.2.3	Limits on the value of nationality in law and practice	105
4.3	Potential Downsides to Citizenship	114
4.3.1	Treatment by the state of one's nationality	115
4.3.1.1	Duties	115
4.3.1.2	Legal Disabilities	116
4.3.2	Treatment by other nations	119
4.3.3	Treatment by international entities	122
4.4	Citizenship as Net Negative	122
4.4.1	For any person	122
4.4.2	For children especially	123
4.5	Conclusion	126
5.	Claiming Persons as Citizens	128
5.1	Introduction	128
5.2	Citizenship and Autonomous Persons	129
5.2.1	Actual consent as a necessary condition	130
5.2.2	Actual consent as a sufficient condition	138
5.3	Citizenship and Children	141
5.3.1	Actual consent as a necessary condition	142
5.3.2	Actual consent as a sufficient condition	145
5.3.3	Prescribing statelessness for children	145
5.4	Benefits of Eliminating Citizenship for Children	146
5.5	Operationalizing a Regime of Universal Statelessness for Children	150
5.5.1	Managing childrearing in a world of universal statelessness	150
5.5.1.1	Social supports	150
5.5.1.2	Residence and relocation	151
5.5.1.3	Documentation of identity	153

5.5.2	Citizenship acquisition upon reaching adulthood	156
5.5.2.1	Grounds of selection	158
5.5.2.2	Timing of selection	162
5.6	Objections	163
5.7	Conclusion	167
6.	Limits on Power over Non-Autonomous Persons	168
6.1	Introduction	168
6.2	Which Governments Currently Exert Power over Private Individuals?	169
6.3	Proper Bounds of Government Authority over the Individual	175
6.4	Government Role in Non-Autonomous Persons' Lives	181
6.4.1	Introducing parens patriae	184
6.4.2	Competing conceptions of parens patriae	185
6.4.3	Contrasting parens patriae with other government functions	189
6.4.3.1	No distinction view	190
6.4.3.2	Complete distinction view	191
6.4.3.3	Simultaneous view	195
6.4.3.4	Sequential view	196
6.5	Normative Underpinnings to Police Power and Parens Patriae Authority	198
6.5.1	Extending the moral basis for autonomous person's self-determination	198
6.5.2	The positive justification for intervention	202
6.6	Implications of Adopting the Fiduciary Conception of Parens Patriae	205
6.7	Conclusion	209
7.	The International Community's Duty to Assist	210
7.1	Introduction	210
7.2	Existing Legal Duty	210
7.3	Moral Obligations	215
7.3.1	Good Samaritan obligation	215
7.3.2	Duty arising from past actions	219
7.4	Conclusion	225
8.	Other States' Duty to Assist	226
8.1	Introduction	226
8.2	Existing Legal Duty	227
8.3	Moral Obligations	229
8.3.1	Good Samaritan obligation	231
8.3.2	Duty arising from past actions	232
8.3.3	Distributive justice	235
8.4	Ways of Fulfilling the Obligation	236
8.4.1	Range of options	236
8.4.2	Immigration policy	237

X CONTENTS

8.4.2.1	Preference of receiving society	238
8.4.2.2	Preference for those who pose less threat to posited values	240
8.5	Conclusion	247
9.	Permissible Intervention	248
9.1	Introduction	248
9.2	Intervention Without Use of Force	249
9.2.1	Offers of assistance	249
9.2.2	Carrots and sticks	255
9.2.3	Facilitating exit	256
9.3	Use of Force	258
9.4	Against Permissibility	260
9.4.1	Practical objections	260
9.4.1.1	Exploitation disguised as altruism	260
9.4.1.2	Unintended consequences	262
9.4.2	Normative objections	263
9.4.3	Permissibility to rescue children in particular	269
9.5	Conclusion	272
	Conclusion	275
	Index	277