

CONTENTS

Notes on contributors	vii
Foreword: Richard Andrews	xiii
Acknowledgements	xvi
Introduction: Teresa Cremin and Terry Locke	xvii

SECTION A

Writing, writers and identity 1

- 1 Conceptualising writing and identity 3
Ian Eyres
- 2 Professional writers' identities: the perceived influence of formal education and early reading 19
Teresa Cremin, Theresa Lillis, Debra Myhill and Ian Eyres

SECTION B

Writing identity and the development of teachers 37

- 3 "I'm not a good writer": supporting teachers' writing identities in a university course 39
Denise N. Morgan
- 4 Addressing resistance: encouraging in-service teachers to think of themselves as writers 53
Chris Street and Kristin K. Stang

- 5 Developing the teacher-writer in professional development 67
Anne Whitney

SECTION C

Teachers as writers: shifting practices and positions in the classroom 81

- 6 Being a writer and teaching writing on the 'rackety bridge':
through the lens of new teachers 83
Marilyn McKinney

- 7 Teachers' identities as writers: teacher, support staff and pupil accounts of the role of emotion in the writing classroom 98
Sally Baker and Teresa Cremin

- 8 Working towards 'I'm a writer and a pretty good writer':
an elementary teacher legitimizing students' writerly identities while authenticating her own 115
Rebecca Woodard

- 9 Developing a whole-school culture of writing 132
Terry Locke

SECTION D

Students' writing identities 149

- 10 Being in the world: students' writing identities beyond school 151
Josephine Brady

- 11 Glancing sideways at young writers becoming 169
Diane R. Collier

- 12 Taught by bitter experience: a timescales analysis of Amalie's development of writer identity 183
Nikolaj Elf

- 13 Writing reflexively: students and teachers shaping texts and identities 200
Mary Ryan

- Afterword: Teresa Cremin and Terry Locke* 219

- Index* 222