

Contents

Table of Cases	xv
Table of Legislation	xli
Table of Treaties and Conventions	xlvi
List of Abbreviations	xlix
1. Introduction	1
The importance of anti-discrimination law	1
Non-discrimination and equality	2
The dynamism inherent in EU law	8
Sources of EU anti-discrimination law	12
(i) The TFEU	13
(ii) Secondary legislation	19
(iii) Decisions of the CJEU and the General Court	21
(iv) Instruments for the protection of fundamental human rights	21
(v) Other indirect sources	22
The grounds on which EU law forbids discrimination	22
(i) Nationality	22
(ii) Sex	23
(iii) Part-time and temporary employment	31
(iv) Racial or ethnic origin	31
(v) Religion or belief	35
(vi) Disability	39
(vii) Age	41
(viii) Sexual orientation	42
2. Essential characteristics of EU law	43
The nature and effects of EU Law	43
The supremacy of EU law	45
Direct enforcement of EU law by individuals	52
(i) Origins of the principle	52
(ii) Direct enforcement of secondary EU legislation	54
(iii) Directives and horizontal effect	61
(iv) Meaning of the 'State'	69
(v) Mitigating the lack of horizontal enforceability of directives	73
(vi) The need to implement directives	87
(vii) The principle of procedural autonomy	89
(viii) Balancing the claims of national law and EU law	94
The constitutional scope of EU law	98

3. General principles and equal treatment	99
General principles as part of EU law	99
Sources of general principles	101
The European Convention on Human Rights	104
(i) The rights and freedoms expressed in the Convention	105
(ii) Article 14	105
(iii) Protocol 12	110
The European Social Charter	112
The Community Social Charter	116
The Charter of Fundamental Rights	117
The substantive content of the general principles relevant to this work	123
(i) A general principle of non-discrimination on the ground of age?	123
(ii) Equal treatment	130
(iii) Proportionality	130
(iv) The general principle of non-discrimination on the ground of sex	131
 4. Key concepts in EU anti-discrimination law	 142
Direct discrimination	143
Indirect discrimination	148
Multi-dimensional discrimination	156
Burden of proof	157
Causation	163
Defences to a discrimination claim	169
Can direct discrimination be justified as a matter of EU law?	171
Harassment and instructions to discriminate	174
Positive action	176
Mainstreaming	177
 5. Equal pay	 180
Scope of the obligation	180
The meaning of 'pay' for the purposes of Article 157	182
(i) Are pensions 'pay' within Article 157?	186
(ii) The principle of equality as applied to pensions	195
(iii) Occupational social security schemes	209
(iv) Other statutorily regulated payments made by employers to their employees	216
(v) Are all employment benefits 'pay'?	221
The meaning of 'equal work'	223
(i) Equal pay for 'equal work'	223
(ii) Work of equal value	231
Defences to an equal pay claim	234
The direct effect of the equal pay principle and the remedies for its breach	246
The equal pay provisions of the Recast Directive	255

(i) The background	255
(ii) The relationship between the directive and Article 157	256
(iii) The content of the Directive's provisions on equal pay	258
6. The scope and enforcement of the workplace anti-discrimination provisions	273
Scope of the legislation	273
Scope of the Recast Directive, Race Directive, and Framework Directive	274
The substantive provisions of the Recast Directive, Race Directive, and Framework Directive	280
(i) Pay	282
(ii) Access to employment	287
(iii) Working conditions	288
(iv) Dismissal	288
(v) Harassment and sexual harassment	296
Remedies and enforcement	301
The directives supplementing the principle of non-discrimination on the ground of sex	315
(i) The Directive on Part-time Work	315
(ii) The Directive on Fixed-term Employees	318
(iii) The Directive on Temporary Agency Work	323
(iv) The Directive on Equal Treatment of the Self-employed	325
7. Discrimination on the grounds of pregnancy and maternity	328
Pregnancy	328
The role of the comparator	333
Health and safety	338
Employment rights during pregnancy and maternity leave	340
Protection against dismissal	346
Parental leave	350
Proposed amendments to the Pregnancy Directive	358
8. Non-workplace discrimination	361
The Race Directive	362
The Goods and Services Directive	366
The 2008 proposal	372
9. Exceptions to the non-discrimination principle	380
Introduction	380
The exceptions	381
(i) Genuine and determining occupational requirement	381
(ii) The special occupational exception for religious bodies	394
(iii) Provisions protecting women	396

(iv) Differences of treatment based on nationality	400
(v) Measures necessary for public security, public order, the prevention of criminal offences, the protection of health, and the protection of the rights and freedoms of others	402
(vi) Payments made by state schemes	404
(vii) The armed forces	405
(viii) Reasonable accommodation for the disabled	405
(ix) Justification on grounds of age	408
(x) The exceptions for Northern Ireland	418
(xi) Additional exceptions contained in the Goods and Services Directive	419
Positive action	420
10. Equality in social security	438
The objectives of the Social Security Directive	439
Scope of application: the persons covered	443
Scope of application: benefits	450
The principle of equal treatment	458
Objective justification	463
Direct effect	470
Implementation	476
Exceptions to the Social Security Directive	481
11. Conclusions	495
The utility of the present law	495
(i) The achievements of the CJEU	495
(ii) The positive significance of individual litigation	502
(iii) The limitations inherent in individual litigation as a proactive strategy	502
What more should be done to protect against discrimination and to further equality of opportunity?	503
(i) Mainstreaming	506
(ii) Individual enforcement	506
(iii) Enforcement at a strategic level	507
Index	509