

CONTENTS

I DAILY WEATHER RECORDS IN THE CZECH LANDS IN THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY II

1	Introduction	9
2	Travel records of Johann Emerich Aichholz about the weather in the Czech Lands in October 1548	11
3	Anonymous weather records in the almanac of Master Mikuláš Šúd ze Semanína of the years 1555-1556	14
4	Jan Strialius z Pomnouše and his meteorological observations of the years 1558-1582	19
4.1	The personality of Jan Strialius z Pomnouše	19
4.2	Strialius's diaries and their analysis	24
4.3	Verification and interpretation of Strialius's meteorological records	31
4.4	Climatological interpretation of Strialius's daily weather records	44
5	Matyáš Borbonius z Borbenheimu and his daily weather observations of 1596-1599 and 1622	47
5.1	The personality of Matyáš Borbonius z Borbenheimu	47
5.2	Borbonius's daily weather records	51
5.3	Verification and interpretation of Borbonius's meteorological records	54
5.4	Climatological interpretation of Borbonius's daily weather records	65
6	Conclusion	67
7	References	69
8	Written historical sources and abbreviations of their editions	76
	Appendix I	81
	Appendix II	82
	Appendix III	103

II EDITION OF DAILY METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS IN THE CZECH LANDS IN THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY II

1	Introductory notes to the editions	115
2	Daily weather records of an anonymous author in the Třeboň specimen of Šúd's calendar for the year 1555	117
3	Weather records in two diaries of Jan Strialius z Pomnouše (1558-1582)	121
4	Weather records in two diaries of the physician Matyáš Borbonius z Borbenheimu (1596-1599, 1622)	181
5	References and sources	225