

Contents

1. Introduction	1
1.1 The political theory of justice in immigration	1
1.2 A migrant-centred point of view	5
1.3 Citizenship and equal rights	10
1.4 Plan of the book	11
2. Temporary Migration Projects	15
2.1 The rise and impact of temporary migration	16
2.2 Temporary migration projects	23
2.3 Some paradigmatic examples	26
2.4 Marginality, subalternity, and vulnerability	39
2.5 Conclusion	42
3. Migration, Ideal Theory, and the Pursuit of Happiness	43
3.1 Immigration, the liberal state, and non-ideal theory	44
3.2 The marginality of temporary migration projects and the wrongs of vulnerability and subalternity	49
3.3 The limits of citizenship	52
3.4 The dislocation of social spaces in temporary migration projects and the social bases of self-respect	56
3.5 Temporary migration projects and ideal theory	58
3.6 Special rights as a solution to the dilemma	61
3.7 Conclusion	63
4. When Is Migration Voluntary?	65
4.1 The notion of voluntariness in the normative theory of migration	66
4.2 Voluntariness and agency	69
4.3 On methodology	71
4.4 What counts as voluntary migration?	75
4.5 Voluntariness and temporary migration	82
4.6 Conclusion	87
5. Migrants' Agency, Liberalism, and Life Plans	89
5.1 Agency and life plans	90
5.2 The principle of accommodation	94
5.3 Migrants as bearers of life plans	100

5.4 The expensive tastes objection	105
5.5 Conclusion	110
6. Welfare and Work Rights	112
6.1 Life plans as the rationale and purpose of special rights for temporary migrants	113
6.2 What rights should temporary migrants have?	118
6.3 Temporary migration, inequality, and social dumping	132
6.4 Conclusion	141
7. Allegiance and Political Rights	142
7.1 Allegiance, national integrity, and failed political integration	143
7.2 Allegiance and the duties towards temporary migrants	150
7.3 Giving voice to temporary migrants: the shortcomings of voting rights	153
7.4 Are there any better alternatives?	159
7.5 Conclusion	166
8. Concluding Remarks	168
Index	174