

Contents

List of Figures	vii
List of Tables	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	1
Christina Fuhrmann and Alison Mero

I The Interdependence of Print and Opera

1	“Mr Hawes is Mr Hawes”: Opera and Music Publishing in Early Nineteenth-Century London	13
	Peter Horton
2	Giovanni in Print	39
	Christina Fuhrmann

II Shaping a Public Persona

3	Authoring the Managerial Memoir: Print Culture and John Ebers’s Seven Years of the King’s Theatre (1828)	65
	Jennifer Hall-Witt
4	“Domestic Affliction” and a “Relaxed Throat”: Reporting on the Tribulations of Mary Shaw	87
	Matildie Wium

III Shaping National Identity

- 5 The "Failure" of Provincial Opera: Nineteenth-Century Opera and Print Culture in Edinburgh 107
Jennifer Oates
- 6 A Special Battlefield: Opera and Print Culture in Nineteenth-Century Ireland 131
Timothy Love
- 7 Opera as Gaeilge: Revivalism and Reception in Fin de Siècle Irish Opera 151
Maria McHale

IV Shaping Taste

- 8 A "Cosy Corner Chat" about Opera: Fashioning New Femininities in The Gentlewoman and The Lady, 1885–1914 171
Michelle Meinhart
- 9 Wagner, the British Press, and Taste Education at the British Musical Festival, 1869–1914 191
Charles Edward McGuire

V Operatic Literature, Literary Opera

- 10 British Wagnerism, George Moore, and Popular Print Culture at the End of the Long Nineteenth Century 211
Julia Grella O'Connell
- 11 Music and Magazines: Dissenting from Opera in the Print Public Sphere 231
James Grande
- 12 Wanting More: Oliver Twist as Beggar's Opera 249
Phyllis Weliver
- Afterword 277
Leanne Langlely
- Notes 289
- Notes on Contributors 353
- Index 357