

Contents

Table of Cases	xi
Table of Other Primary Authorities	xiii

PART I. FOUNDATIONS

1. Setting the scene	3
I. Overview	3
II. Development of the prohibition of the use of force in international law	3
III. Unpacking illegality	8
IV. Structure of the book	11
2. Conceptualizing illegality	14
I. Introduction	14
II. Three concepts of illegality	14
1. Objectivist understanding of illegality	15
2. Relativist understanding of illegality	19
3. Legality and illegality as a continuum	24
4. Conclusions on the concept of illegality	29
a) Differentiation of the types of application of the law	30
b) Differentiation according to actors	31
c) Objectivist understanding of the law as an ideal	32
d) The rationale for relativism	34
III. Dealing with the law's indeterminacy	35
1. Causes of legal indeterminacy	36
2. Core and periphery of meaning	39
3. Indeterminacy and the prohibition of force	42
IV. Illegality and norm contestation	43
1. Dynamic understanding of norms and contestation of norms	43
2. Tensions between understanding of norms in international law and political science	47
3. Lessons from political science analyses for international legal scholarship	50
V. Concluding thoughts	52

PART II. TYPOLOGY OF ILLEGALITY

3. Overview of the types of illegality	57
I. Unpacking illegality	57
II. Overview of subsequent chapters	59
4. Conflict and illegality in the application of the law	61
I. Introduction	61
II. Dispute over application of existing law	61
III. Concretization of the content of legal norms	65
IV. Confirmation of legal norms	68
1. The ICJ's confirmation hypothesis	68
2. Breach of law as confirmation of law according to the sources of international law	69
3. Preconditions for confirming a legal rule	71
a) Invocation of the law	72
b) Invocation of an established norm	72
c) Invocation of an established interpretation of the law	73
d) Limits of confirmation: cynical use of the law	74
e) Limits of confirmation: propagandistic manipulation of the facts	77
V. Concluding thoughts	79
5. Necessity: Breach of law in individual cases	81
I. Introduction	81
II. Breach of law and legitimacy arguments in practice	81
III. 'Illegal but legitimate'	85
IV. Exculpation of unlawful use of force?	88
1. Basic availability of necessity as an excuse	90
2. Jus cogens character of the prohibition of the use of force, Article 26 ARSIWA	92
3. Preconditions for necessity, Article 25(1) ARSIWA	94
4. Exclusion of the invocation of necessity, Article 25(2) ARSIWA	96
5. No possibility of exculpation	100
V. Concluding thoughts	101
6. Application of the law and conflicts in the grey areas of the law	104
I. Introduction	104
II. The grey areas of the law	105
III. Practice of creating and maintaining grey areas of the law	109
1. Open legal norms and new empirical phenomena	109
2. Formulaic compromises and constructive ambiguity	110
3. Practice without clear opinio juris	114
4. State responses open to interpretation	115
5. Lack of legal regulation	116
6. Function of the courts	117

IV. Grey areas between integrative effect and pathology	120
V. Concluding thoughts	122
7. Legislative illegality: law-breaking as law-making	124
I. Introduction	124
II. State practice of 'law-making by law-breaking'	124
III. The view from legal doctrine	130
IV. Potentials and dangers of legislative illegality	135
1. Potentials and functions	136
2. Dangers of legislative illegality	138
3. The paradox of legislative illegality	139
V. Concluding thoughts	141
8. Systemic opposition in disguise	142
I. Introduction	142
II. Covert military interventions	143
1. Covert interventions in practice	143
2. The political dimensions of covert military interventions	145
3. Legal standards and consequences for the law	147
4. Covert practice and erosion of norms	151
III. Open non-invocation of the law	151
1. State practice of open non-invocation of the law	151
2. Impact on norms of international law	155
3. Weakening of the law as a normative system	156
IV. Danger of general delegalization	157
9. Illegality and systemic opposition	159
I. Introduction	159
II. Historical forms of systemic opposition	159
1. Socialist international law	160
a) The thesis of the inevitability of war	160
b) International law of the transitional period	161
c) International law and permanent peaceful coexistence	164
d) Proletarian/socialist internationalism	167
e) The content of the systemic opposition of socialist international law	171
2. US exceptionalism	172
a) Foreign policy doctrines of the United States	172
b) Systemic opposition	177
c) Core of the US strategy of systemic opposition	180
III. Recent and current systemic challenges	182
1. Systemic opposition from within	182
2. Islamic State as a revolutionary 'state'	185
3. Cynical uses of international law	187
4. Trumpism as an 'anti-legal' revolution	188
IV. Illegality, systemic opposition, and integrative capacity of the law	190

PART III. OUTLOOK

10. Conclusions	195
I. Overview	195
II. The levels of conflict over the prohibition of the use of force	196
1. Level of conflict 1: application of the law	198
2. Level of conflict 2: dispute over abstract-general content of a norm	199
3. Level of conflict 3: dispute over validity of the prohibition of the use of force	199
4. Ambivalences in the choice of level of conflict	200
III. Law versus legitimacy	204
1. The danger of legitimacy criteria	205
2. The proper place for legitimacy considerations is on the side of legal consequences	208
3. Elements of a concept of legitimacy	209
a) Action to protect a legal interest under international law	210
b) Gravity of the breach	211
c) Inability of collective security institutions to act	211
d) Legitimizing role of the UN General Assembly	212
e) Other positions taken by the UN Security Council	213
f) Case-specific impact assessment	214
g) Rule-specific impact assessment	215
h) Formulation of clear standards	215
IV. Centrifugal forces	215
11. Jus contra bellum quo vadis?	219
Bibliography	229
Index	247