

Contents

Tomáš Černušák, Jiří Hrbek, Štěpán Vácha

Introduction — 1

Alexander Koller

Protagonists, Issues, and Spaces: Papal Policy at the Beginning of Rudolf II's Reign (1576–1584) — 29

Guido Braun

“i ministri [. . .] sono tutti hormai disautorizzati, ne comunicano si può dir più co 'l padrone”: Social Interaction, Communication Structures and Languages at the Prague Imperial Court from the Perspective of the Nuncios and the Roman Curia around 1600 — 57

Tomáš Černušák

Negotiation Spaces of Apostolic Nuncios in Prague at the Turn of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries: A Topographic Reconstruction — 77

Tamás Kruppa

Hungarians and the Prague Nunciature — 99

Štěpán Vácha, Markéta Ježková

Public or Private: The Display of Art in Rudolf II's Imperial Residence at Prague Castle — 119

Sylva Dobalová

Diplomats and the Recreational Spaces of the Habsburgs in Prague: What Was There to See? — 145

Václav Bůžek

Clients, Agents, and Intelligence Operatives of the Bavarian Dukes at the Court of Rudolf II — 173

Kateřina Pražáková

Saxon Diplomats at the Court of Rudolf II (1609) — 195

VI — Contents

Rubén González Cuerva

An Empress and an Ambassador: The Settlement of Spanish Agents at the Court of Prague (1577–1581) — 215

Giorgio Rota

One Emperor, One Shah, Too Many Ambassadors: Safavid Envoys in Prague (1600–1612) — 233

Hana Ferencová

The Traces of English Diplomacy in Rudolfine Prague — 259

About the Authors — 277

Index — 281