

Table of Contents

Cover image

Title page

Copyright

Contributors

Chapter One: Transportation where people leave: An introduction

Abstract

1 The national level

2 The regional level

3 The city and neighborhood levels

Chapter Two: Air transport accessibility changes in depopulating European states

Abstract

1 Introduction

2 Development and key characteristics of air transport

3 European Union characteristics and the identification of depopulating places

4 European Union depopulation and air transport

5 Conclusions

Acknowledgments

Chapter Three: The potential of a Mobility-as-a-Service platform in a depopulating area in The Netherlands: An exploration of small and big data

Abstract

1 Introduction

2 Mobility solutions for rural areas: Literature review

3 Case study area

4 Evaluating the potential for a mobility as a service

5 Conclusions and further steps

Chapter Four: Evaluating relative accessibility to retail in depopulated areas: Case study of the Maestrazgo region in Spain

Abstract

1 Introduction

2 Relative accessibility to basic need services

3 Case of study: The Maestrazgo (Aragón, Spain)

4 Research design

5 Results

6 Implications for policymaking

7 Conclusions

Acknowledgments

Chapter Five: Older drivers in rural areas: Implications for health, social inclusion and caregiving

Abstract

1 Introduction

2 Background: Setting the context

3 Data and methods: The canadian context

4 Results

5 Conclusion and implications

Acknowledgment

Chapter Six: Adapting transport related innovations to rural needs: Smart Mobility and the example of the Heinsberg region, Germany

Abstract

1 Introduction

2 Conceptually framing studies on rural conditions for Smart Mobility solutions

3 Case study: Smart Mobility in the region of Heinsberg, Germany

4 Conclusions

Acknowledgements

Chapter Seven: Change versus decline: The suburbanization of jobs in U.S. shrinking cities

Abstract

1 Introduction

2 Literature review

3 Methods

4 Results

5 Conclusion

Acknowledgements

Appendix

Chapter Eight: Commuting behavior and local population loss: Means of transportation to work as an indicator of urban decline

Abstract

1 Introduction

2 Background

3 Data and methods

4 Results

5 Discussion

6 Conclusion

Acknowledgment