

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	page v
Introduction	1
1. The Forging of Serbia's Intellectual Opposition	13
The forerunners: Djilas and Mihajlov, 1952–66	17
The critique of the Titoist system in the 1960s: the 'Black Wave' and the 'New Left'	22
The emergence of 'nationalists' and 'liberals', 1967–71	28
The defence of civil rights, 1975–86	47
2. The 'Outburst of History' and the New Serbian Nationalism	64
The crisis of the 1980s and the breakdown of official historiography	65
'De-Titoisation' and the revision of history in Serbia: Yugoslavia reconsidered	77
The theme of genocide: the Second World War revisited	100
3. The Watershed: Intellectuals and Kosovo, 1985–8	115
Defining the 'Kosovo question', 1981–5	116
Defending the Kosovo Serbs, 1985–7	132
Seeking solidarity: Kosovo and Yugoslavia, 1986–8	145

4. Serbs and Slovenes: 'National Interests' in Conflict, 1980–8	162
Marching together, moving apart, 1981–6	163
Repositories of the new nationalism: the draft 'Memorandum' of the Serbian Academy and 'Contributions for a Slovenian National Programme'	177
The constitutional debate and the scramble for national programmes, 1987–8	195
5. The Victory of 'National Homogenisation', 1988–91	206
Serbia's intellectual opposition and Slobodan Milošević, 1988–9	207
Disintegration, multipartism and the end of the Belgrade critical intelligentsia, 1989–91	227
Conclusion	254
Bibliography	261
Index	287