

CONTENTS

Preface and Acknowledgements xi

Introduction	1
PART I. APPROACHES	7
1 Who Were the Dangerous Dead?	9
2 Fearing Dead Friends, Killing Dead Enemies: Are Animated Corpses a Human Constant?	24
3 The Dangerous Dead in Society	34
4 Rest in Peace (and Don't Come Back): Hovering on the Threshold of Death's Door	46
5 Understanding Stories (1): The Spoken and Written Word	57
6 Understanding Stories (2): Vampires in Print	67
7 Understanding Corpses: The Evidence of Burial Archaeology	79
PART II. DYNAMICS	97
8 The Circumpolar World and Northern Asia: Corpses and Life-Forces	99

9	India and China: Lumpen Corpses and Lustful Hyena-Women	111
10	Flying Demons and Dangerous Women	119
11	The 'Carmilla Template' in China and the Eastern Roman Empire	130
12	Wonder-Working Women: The Power and the Danger	142
PART III. FROM THE ANCIENT MIDDLE EAST TO THE EARLY MEDIEVAL NORTH		155
13	Mesopotamia, Greece, and Rome before Christ	157
14	The Later Roman World and Christianity	166
15	The British Isles and Northern Francia, 200–600: Social Trauma, Wise-Women, and Mortuary Theatre	177
16	The Christian English, 600–700 (1): Saintry Women and Holy Inccorrupt Bodies	192
17	The Christian English, 600–700 (2): Sinister Women and Dangerous Inccorrupt Bodies	201
18	Francia, England, and Scandinavia, 700–1000	216
PART IV. EUROPE IN THE HIGH MIDDLE AGES		233
19	Motifs Taking Shape: The Making of the 'European Vampire'	235
20	An Icelandic Epidemic?	243
21	The English Walking Dead, 1000–1200 (1): Stories and Corpses	251

22	The English Walking Dead, 1000–1200 (2): Breaking God's Law and the King's	262
23	Central and Southern Europe, 1000–1400	272
PART V. LATE MEDIEVAL AND EARLY
	MODERN EUROPE	287
24	The Eurasian Reservoir of Beliefs: Night-Battlers, Damned Huntsmen, and Bloodsucking Corpses	289
25	Life-Forces, Shape-Shifters, and Dangerous Corpses: Eastern Europe, 1400–1750	296
26	The Dead Retreat Northward Again: England and Scotland, 1200–1750	312
27	Noxious Corpses and Noisy Shroud-Eaters: The German-Speaking Lands in the Age of Reformation	322
28	Movers and Shakers: Active Corpses in Bohemia and Silesia, 1330–1600	332
29	The Dangerous Dead between Witchcraft and the Enlightenment: East-Central Europe, 1550–1700	343
30	From Moravia to Transylvania: The Carpathian Arc, 1700–25	358
31	Vampires in the News, 1725–57	373
PART VI. THE MODERN WORLD: TOWARDS
	FOLKLORE AND FICTION	383
32	Vampires for a Scientific Age: Pennsylvania and New England	385

33	'The Horrible Scenes of Old Time': Europe after 1750	400
34	Vampires of Colonialism and Slavery	417
	Conclusion: The Dangerous Dead as Mirrors of Reality	429

Notes 441

Bibliography 477

Illustration Sources and Credits 499

Index 503