

Contents

Notes on contributors	vii
Acknowledgements	ix
1 Preludes, introductions and meanings John Carter	1
Part I Postmodern frameworks and social policy
2 Studying social policy after modernity John Carter	15
3 Postmodernism, poststructuralism and social policy John R. Gibbins	31
4 Oppositional postmodern theory and welfare analysis: anti-oppressive practice in a postmodern frame Martin O'Brien and Sue Penna	49
5 Quality assurance and evaluation in social work in a postmodern era Barbara Fawcett and Brid Featherstone	67
Part II Critical social policy and postmodernity
6 'One step beyond': critical social policy in a 'postmodern' Britain? Kirk Mann	85
7 Postmodernity and the future of welfare: whose critiques, whose social policy? Suzy Croft and Peter Beresford	103

Part III Social divisions and social exclusion

- 8 New horizons? New insights? Postmodernising social policy and the case of sexuality 121
Jean Carabine
- 9 Reopening the gift: race and the critique of normative social policy 136
Chris Smaje
- 10 Individualisation processes and social policy: insecurity, reflexivity and risk in the restructuring of contemporary British health and housing policies 153
Sarah Nettleton and Roger Burrows

Part IV Governance and new technologies of control in the new social policy

- 11 Thriving on chaos? Managerialisation and social welfare 171
John Clarke
- 12 Performativity and fragmentation in 'postmodern schooling' 187
Stephen J. Ball
- 13 Post-Betty Fordism and neo-liberal drug policies 204
Robin Bunton
- 14 Welfare direct: informatics and the emergence of self-service welfare? 220
Brian D. Loader

Part V Citizenship amid the fragmented nation state

- 15 The delivery of welfare: the associationist vision 237
Paul Hoggett and Simon Thompson
- 16 Globalisation, fragmentation and local welfare citizenship 252
Allan Cochrane
- 17 Postmodernity and Social Europe 267
Norman Ginsburg
- Index 278