

Contents

Introduction (Hana Vlhová-Wörner)	9
1. The Scribe(s), Genesis, and Use of the Manuscript Vyšší Brod 42 (Jan Ciglbauer)	15
Introduction	15
Musical and liturgical culture at the Vyšší Brod abbey	17
Manuscript description	23
Text hands	25
Music hands	35
From hands to scribes	42
The scribe of the chant section	45
Genesis of VB 42	47
The identity of Przybico	49
Conclusion	52
Codicological structure of VB 42	54
2. Secundum morem nostrum and secundum morem secularem: the Liturgical Repertory in the Manuscript Vyšší Brod 42 (Hana Vlhová-Wörner)	85
The liturgical repertory of VB 42: description of the contents	91
I. Processionale and Mandatum antiphons (nos. 19–66)	91
II. Cantus Missalis: Liber generacionis and prefaces (nos. 65–75)	109
III. Kyriale (nos. 76–103)	115
IV. Cantus Gradualis (Cantus Alleluia et Graduale) (nos. 104–112)	127
V. Cantus de sancto Wenceslao (nos. 113–117)	134

VI. Antiphonae et Cantica de Beata Maria Virginiae (nos. 118–128)	140
VII. Cantus ad Vesperas et ad Completorium (nos. 129–141)	152
VIII. Sequentiae (nos. 142–152)	160
Interpretations and hypotheses	164
The compilation of the liturgical repertory: a new scenario	164
For what purpose?	168
Reconsidering “secular repertory” in the Cistercian liturgy in the late Middle Ages	169
3. Manuscript Vyšší Brod 42: a New Perspective on the Tradition of Late Medieval Cantiones (Lenka Hlávková – Pavel Kodýtek)	175
The cantio in current discourse and VB 42	179
Songs, scribes, and notation in VB 42	185
Oral transmission of cantiones	208
The songs and sources at a glance	212
Tracing oral transmission	218
Cedit hiems eminus : the life of one cantio	226
The song Cedit hiems eminus in VB 42	229
Features of the oral tradition and the uses of memory	232
The melodic and rhythmic structure of the cantio
Cedit hiems	234
Comparison to other monophonic copies	238
The two-part version	242
Polyphonic version	250
Textual analysis	256
Conclusion	265
Abbreviations	267
List of Sources	269
Bibliography	281
Index	299

Supplementary material for this book is available at www.karolinum.cz.
This includes Appendices 3.1–3.6.